Services Before Taxes

WASHINGTON (WP) — Americans aren't nearly as angry at how much they have to pay in taxes as they are at how little they get from government in return, a national poll by The Washington Post suggests.

The results indicate that the so-called "tax revolt" across the country is aimed less at taxes than at the quality of government employees' service, which most people perceive as poor.

People in all regions say, by 3 to 1, that they would vote for any measure such as California's Proposition 13 that would cut federal, state or local taxes.

At the same time, however, two out of three surveyed say they would prefer to see taxes kept at present levels if only government could be made to work, rather than have taxes and the level of government services reduced.

That does not mean, of course, that people are unconcerned about taxes. But it does put things in a somewhat different perspective from the one most often heard.

Many people see tax cuts as a way of eliminating waste in government and forcing public officials to become more efficient. Many others feel government won't become more efficient even with sharp tax cuts.

In all, seven of every eight persons in the Post survey said they are more concerned about the way tax money is spent than the amount of taxes they pay. The great majority do not want cuts in specific programs, such as welfare.

Their real concern, the survey suggests, is that it is the bureaucracy, not the public, that benefits from taxes. Tax money is seen as largely wasted by local, state and federal governments that have padded payrolls and employees who are overpaid, lazy, discourteous and inefficient.

MORE THAN 1,000 DEAD

Syrian Pounding Destroying Beirut

The Syrian bombardment of Beirut's Christian districts continued unabated today after an all-night pounding, the Lebanese capital's Christian radio station said today.

More than 1,000 dead or wounded Lebanese were reported in the first seven days of fighting that began Sept. 27.

The Christians' Voice of Lebanon gave no new casualty figures but said four Syrian army trucks full of bodies of Syrian soldiers killed in the fighting were seen driving away from Beirut.

The Christian broadcast said Syrian shelling of East Beirut and its environs did not cease once during the night.

The conflict that has destroyed much of the Christian sector of east Beirut is spilling over into the western entertainment and commercial centre, an area that in better times earned Beirut the name "Paris of the Middle East."

In what diplomats saw as a bid to rally civilian morale, the rightist militias vowed to turn their guns against Syria should the battles continue.

The fighting has raged virtually uninterrupted, without even the morning lulls of the civil war. Militia officials said it had spread to the plush hill resorts of Bickfaya, Broumana, and Beit Mery as well as the [illegible] of Faraya.

The Syrians — dominating the 30,000-man Arab League peacekeeping force that ended the Lebanese civil war 23 months ago — swapped hit-and-run raids with the outgunned militias but there was no major change in ground position.

Phalangist radio warned Christian civilians beginning their fifth straight day in makeshift basement shelters that the Syrians were heavily reinforcing and that no end to the fighting appeared in sight.

Lebanese president Elias Sarkis was in urgent telephone contact overnight with Syrian President Hafez Assad, government and diplomatic sources said.

The sources said the talks focused on securing crucial Syrian approval for a peace plan proposed by France and backed by a number of Western powers.

The Syrians and their Lebanese Moslem backers have rejected similar blueprints — calling for a curtailed Syrian troop role and an expanded position for the Lebanese army — over recent months.

Giving an added note of urgency to the efforts was the first indication since the latest fighting began that the militias' Israeli allies might not stand idly by. The head of the foreign affairs and defense committee in Israel's parliament told Israeli state radio Wednesday, "I would not want to believe we'll allow the Syrians to destroy the Christians."

Meanwhile, Syrian President Assad arrived in Moscow today to try to get more Soviet arms for use against Christians and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's support in destroying the Camp David agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Despite rain, Brezhnev was at the airport to welcome the Syrian leader.

Pneumonia Resists Penicillin

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors fear that two newly discovered strains of pneumonia-causing bacteria — which resist almost all commonly used antibiotics — will spread throughout the world.

The bacteria, found in South Africa, cannot be destroyed by penicillin, the most frequently prescribed medicine for pneumonia. Only highly toxic drugs usually avoided by doctors will kill them.

The researchers say widespread administration of a newly approved vaccine may be the only practical way to fight the pneumonia caused by these germs, which was frequently a fatal disease before use of penicillin became common in the 1940s.

The bacteria were isolated in July, 1977, at two hospitals in Johannesburg and have spread throughout South Africa.

IGNORED ART NETS $8,500

For years Daniel Buckthorpe owned an old oil painting that never saw the light of day.

His wife hated the picture — an eastern Canadian harbor scene — and for that reason it was never hung in their home.

When the Buckthorpes moved here two years ago from Montreal the picture came with them wrapped in a plastic bag.

They stored it in the basement of their home at 1023 Holland and forgot about it until a couple of weeks ago.

Buckthorpe, a 49-year-old locksmith, is now glad he remembered that hated painting.

This week it was sold at an art auction at Lund's for $8,500.

The 21-inch by 28-inch painting is the work of famed Montreal artist Robert Pilot.

Buckthorpe acquired the painting about 14 years ago while he was cleaning out an attic in one of the buildings that used to be the residence of shipping magnate Sir Hugh Allen.

He asked if he could have it and was told: "Sure — all this junk has to go."

A couple of weeks ago the Buckthorpes were having dinner with friends when he mentioned he believed he had an original Pilot.

The friends were impressed and passed on the information to John Boyle, an auctioneer with Lunds.

"If it was a Pilot, would he sell?" Boyle asked.

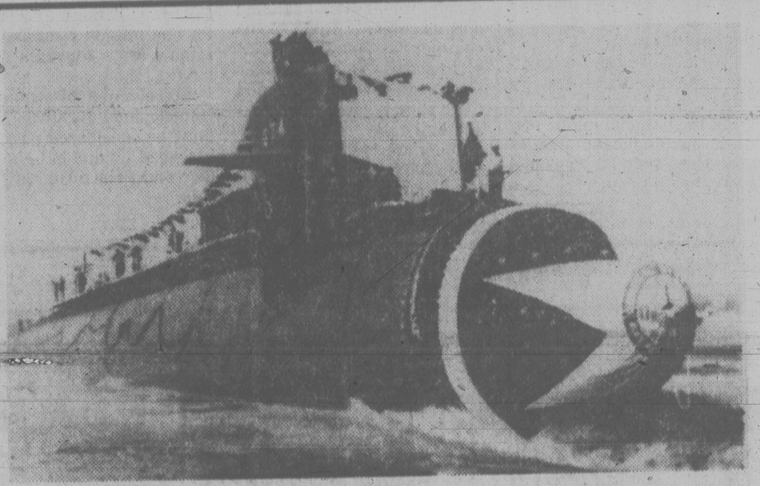
Buckthorpe agreed.

When Boyle called the next day and told him what it had sold for, Buckthorpe nearly collapsed.

"I was absolutely amazed," he said.

But Torban Kristiensen, an international art dealer from Vancouver, knew a good thing when he saw it.

Not only did he buy the Pilot but he picked up two smaller original oils by Group of Seven artists A.Y. Jackson and Edwin Holgate. For the Jackson he paid $1,400; for the Holgate $1,300.



N-SUB TAKEOVER PLOTTED BY TRIO

Times News Services

ST. LOUIS — It reads like the script for a best-selling spy thriller: board a U.S. nuclear submarine, kill the crew, head for the high seas after firing a nuclear-tipped missile at an East Coast city and then turn the sub over to a buyer.

But the Federal Bureau of Investigation says the plot was real and three men have been arrested.

The FBI said the conspirators told a federal undercover agent they had a purchaser for the submarine, the USS Trepang, based in New London. In announcing the breakup of the bizarre plot Wednesday night, agents said the identity of the prospective buyer — if any — was not known.

Bernard Feeney of the FBI in New Haven, Conn., said at least 20 agents have been working on the case in earnest since August although at first the agency had trouble taking the plot seriously.

"It sounds like a Woody Allen movie when you hear it for the first time," Feeney said.

But, he said, "The documentation was there for us to believe they were serious ... And you've got to nip it in the bud. You can't let these things run their course.

"I don't think it originated with another country," Feeney added. "Maybe these fellows thought they could hide it underwater and broker it someway."

He added, "There is no way with our sonar equipment that this thing could be out of pocket for too long."

Two suspects, Edward J. Mendenhall, 24, a life insurance company employee from Rochester, N.Y., and Kurtis J. Schmidt, a 22-year-old carpet cleaner formerly from St. Louis and now living in Kansas City, Mo., were arrested Wednesday in St. Louis.

The third suspect, James W. Cosgrove, 26, of Ovid, N.Y., was arrested early today in Rochester, N.Y.

Tight Budget Hits RJH Patient Care

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Patient care is beginning to suffer at Royal Jubilee Hospital as a result of budget restrictions by the provincial government.

RJH board vice-president Terry Prentice said in an interview: "Things are getting a little too tight."

He said because of a tight squeeze on RJH's budget, the hospital is having to cut staff or keep staffing to a minimum.

Prentice warned it has reaching the stage where the board feels there is danger of a staff revolt similar to the one which took place earlier this year at Vancouver Gneral Hospital.

He said because of the tight staffing, RJH employees are facing heavier workloads and sooner or later are going to say:

"To heck with you, if you don't care about me, I don't care about you."

"We are concerned that the situation is approaching that point now," Prentice said.

He said staff can quit or go on strike but the only people who will suffer if that happens are the patients.

Prentice gave some examples to illustrate the hospital's problems:

—A seven-month delay in elective surgery cases;

—About 800 elective surgery cases cancelled in the first nine months of this year;

—164 acute care beds occupied by patients who should be in hospitals providing other forms of care such as extended, long-term or personal;

—The hospital frequently has as many as 23 patients over the approved number, resulting in some patients being put in hallways.

Animals Worry Howie

The people have been friendly during Al Howie's long, lonely run to Port Hardy — and he hopes the bears and cougars will treat him the same way.

Howie is running to the northern tip of Vancouver Island to raise funds for the United Way campaign. Pledges to date top $200.

This morning Howie was running north of Campbell River and nearing Sayward-Kelsey Bay, the last outpost before plunging into the bush country. Kelsey Bay is 344 kilometres from his starting point in Victoria.

"I like animals but I keep thinking what it might be like to meet a cougar in the dark," he said this morning.

"I hope to make it to Port Hardy by Saturday. I will phone again Friday if I can reach a phone — and all has gone well."

So far the people have made his run a pleasant experience.

"Everyone seems to have heard about it and I got free lodging at Courtenay and a salmon dinner on the house at Campbell River."

Except for this occasional help, all expenses are coming out of Howie's pocket.

Those wishing to pledge funds to the United Way in support of Howie's run can reach the UW office by phoning 385-6708.

MAIN LINE OUT

A break in the main transmission line from the mainland knocked out power in southern Vancouver Island for about 20 minutes this morning.

The power failure tripped a couple of alarms and caused some traffic congestion in the downtown core but Greater Victoria police and firemen reported no major problems.

A spokesman for B.C. Hydro said the trouble originated at 9:51 a.m. in the direct current line from the mainland which ends at a substation north of Duncan.

The spokesman was unable to say whether the problems arose on the Island or mainland side of the line.

All of the lower Island except parts of the downtown Victoria area were affected.

Power began to be restored at 10:10 a.m.

Battle Begins for U.S. TV

VANCOUVER (CP) — Television viewers in British Columbia, led by Liberal MP Art Lee and two radio talk show hosts, are combining forces in opposition to a proposal by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission to limit to four the number of United States television channels on cablevision.

Cablevision now carries six U.S. channels in the province.

The fight "boils down to the people telling the government what they want," says Lee, MP for Vancouver East.

Talk show hosts John Reynolds and Garry Bannerman both launched public opinion polls last week on the issue, and say that opposition to the four-channel limit is overwhelming.

Lee, who will be appearing before the CRTC Oct. 24 with an intervention on behalf of the Liberal caucus in B.C. to fight the cutback, suggested that the federal government might appoint a new CRTC which could reflect the needs of British Columbians.

There are currently no full-time B.C. members on the commission.

"At the present moment there is a review of the constitution and the chairmanship of all quasi-judicial bodies like the CRTC," Lee said. "My position is that the review should be extended to the individual members of these bodies to ensure there is regional representation to reflect the needs of the people."

The theory behind the CRTC proposal is that if there is a limit on the number of U.S. channels permitted on Canadian cablevision, more of the Canadian advertising dollar will go to Canadian stations, thereby providing more money for Canadian programming, he added.

If Canadian firms continue to advertise on U.S. stations, he said, it must be the programming of the Canadian stations that is at fault.

Sandy Buschan, spokesman for the Association of Lower Mainland Cablevision Operators, said that cablevision companies must carry all available Canadian content.

Yiddish Writer Wins Nobel

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The 1978 Nobel Prize for literature was awarded today to Isaac Bashevis Singer, a prolific Jewish story-teller whose portraits of a bygone life in pre-war Poland have touched a basic "kinship between souls" and won him a wide audience.

The 74-year-old novelist and short-story writer, who writes in Yiddish, has lived in New York since emigrating from his Polish homeland 43 years ago. He is a U.S. citizen.

In awarding the $165,000 prize to Singer, the Swedish Academy of Letters cited him for "his impassioned narrative art which, with roots in a Polish-Jewish cultural tradition, brings universal human conditions to life."

Singer, reached in Miami, told a reporter: "I'm grateful but at the same time I am sorry that writers greater than I did not get it. I hope in the future that all people who deserve recognition shall get it.

"The greatest writers of all times did not get it. Tolstoy was a candidate and some

Drop Commercials On TV, CBC Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC was asked Wednesday to consider dropping advertising on its English-language television service and to adopt the format of public broadcasting service similar to those in the United States.

Pierre Camu, chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, said he would like to discuss the suggestion with CBC officials, perhaps today.

Jack Craine, network director of programming, had just finished telling the CRTC the CBC continued to carry U.S. programs because they helped draw bigger audiences for Canadian shows that followed them (see story on page 31) and because they helped generate much of the $90 million CBC earned in advertising revenue.

Craine admitted that the CBC was "nearing the end of the import era."

"As more and more isolated communities receive cable . . . the logic lessens of using the national public network to duplicate images available only a channel away," said Craine.

Camu said he wondered whether the time was far off when the commission could consider a Canadian public broadcasting service if CBC were to drop advertising.

Advertising paid only about 18 per cent of the CBC budget, he noted.

Many Canadians were fascinated by the public service broadcasting seen on their cable systems, he said. And they were sending money to support such systems in the United States.

Without commercials, an end to advertising constraints forcing CBC to air U.S. programs and no worries about ratings, there might not also be a need for a second proposed CBC network, Camu said.

The CBC is considering a second network service which would be available only on cable. It would run no commercials, operate only at night and would, among other things, rerun well-regarded CBC shows such as drama and ballets.

When president Al Johnson appeared before the commission to put the CBC's case for licence renewals, he said it was unrealistic at this time to consider dropping commercials for the television network.

He said this was especially so because of the $71 million cut in revenue CBC expected next year. The government announced the cut in August as part of its austerity program.

Craine, outlining scheduling problems to the CRTC, said the importance of the U.S. shows from a revenue point of view made it difficult for him to find prime time for Canadian specials.

But CBC charged higher advertising rates for the popular U.S. shows on prime time. And they drew larger audiences for Canadian shows that followed them.

Craine also noted that the CBC is still the only vehicle for one million Canadians in remote areas to watch popular U.S. shows.

"A selection of American comedy and adventure shows must be considered part of a balanced TV diet in Labrador City and Prince George," he said.

U.S. TV Battle Begins

"But if the viewing public wants more, why can't they have it?" he asked. "We just don't see the reasoning behind it (the four-channel limit.)"

Meanwhile, the vice-president of the CTV network said that Canadian television stations must broadcast U.S. programs as long as they come in by cable on other channels.

Don Coyle was responding to recent comments made by Al Johnson, CBC president, who said privately-owned stations have yielded to the profit motive by packing prime viewing hours with American programs.

Coyle said: "If you don't give Canadians what they want, they'll turn completely to American channels."

Paul Morton, president of Global Television Network, said it was easy for Johnson to make such statements "when you have a budget of half a billion dollars."

Morton said Global's budget was in the $30-million range.

Gov't Power Abuse Warning from Blais

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais issued a warning Wednesday against government abuse of power and authority, saying state intervention through legislation often infringes on basic human rights.

"Such is the potential for abuse of authority inherent in so many discretionary powers that the members of the legal profession must be on the alert constantly for any subversion of the individual's rights," Blais said.

He referred to a Law Reform Commission study identifying some 15,000 discretionary powers granted government and bureaucrats through legislation. And he spoke of threats to rights posed by a proliferation in the last few years of government boards, commissions and administrative tribunals.

"When the state intervenes through legislation it often infringes upon basic human rights," he said in a speech to University of Ottawa law students.

"The state endeavours to protect its citizens collectively, but often at the expense of the citizen's absolute freedom — a very difficult sacrifice to make.

"This dilemma faces every individual and future lawyers cannot remain indifferent to this situation, for it brings the very foundations of our society into question."

Blais was telling the students that there is room for increasing numbers of lawyers in fields other than civil and criminal law practice. A text of his speech was released in advance.

He said increasing numbers of citizens find they have to contend with administrative bodies, requiring more lawyers to assist them through "this seemingly bewildering maze."

The growth in the maze has increased the need to protect the rights of the individual against the state but Blais said that while the need to protect the rights of the individual against the state has increased, such protections are often not apparent in semi-judicial situations.

"Unfortunately, whether or not justice is actually done before these boards and tribunals, the appearance of justice is often missing because apparent checks on the abuse of the individual's civil rights are not as much in evidence as they are in criminal proceedings."

Rules of evidence are looser and decisions are made on the basis of two sides of argument, rather than proof of something beyond a reasonable doubt. Yet the result of such decisions may be as severe as sanctions under the Criminal Code, he said.

Budget Squeeze

Prentice said the board is seeking a meeting with Health Minister Bob McClelland to try impress upon him the seriousness of the situation.

He said the hospital wants to get its message across soon enough to prevent problems similar to those at Vancouver General Hospital.

Prentice made his remarks in commenting on the board's annual meeting Wednesday night.

The meeting was told the hospital ended the fiscal year March 31, 1978 with a deficit of $60,000. That figure covered the 15-month period from Jan. 1, 1977.

Prentice said the deficit was $1.5 million prior to some cost levelling by the hospital programs section of the department of health.

He said the hospital could have made $500,000 more if its acute care beds had been all occupied by acute care patients. The government pays the hospital $100 a day more for acute care patients than extended care patients.

However, he said, there is a lack of beds for other kinds of care and as a result, those people who really need extended care have to stay in hospitals like RJH.

The solution is to provide more facilities for other kinds of care, he said.

This lack of beds also affects the surgery that is done because without a bed to put them in the hospital is unable to offer elective surgery to patients who need it.

Prentice said RJH now has working capital to cover only four working days and if it has to borrow from the bank it will have to pay the added interest from its approved budget, putting further strain on things like staffing.

He said the government has only approved a two-per-cent increase in salaries for nurses and other hospital employees this year even though negotiated settlements call for a four-per-cent increase.

That two-per-cent difference, which must be found in the approved budget, amounts to about $600,000 he said.

Prentice said he realizes the costs of health care these days are high and it is difficult for the minister to keep things uner control.

"Those in the hospital are saying we do what we can, but we feel we have cut things too far."

He said McClelland told the hospitals two years ago that they should cut costs wherever they could without harming patient care.

"We say it is our value judgement that we are at that point now."

Chubby Is Sexy, She Claims

TORONTO (CP) — Stella Jolles Reichman, a New York fashion consultant, says men may take women built like beanpoles out to dinner, but look for buxom women when they're after someone sensuous to take to bed.

In Toronto to promote her book Great Big Beautiful Doll, Mrs. Reichman said women with weight problems should throw away their diet books and enjoy a good meal for the first time in years.

She said her big-is-beautiful campaign is directed against advertisers who have cultivated the myth that women should feel inferior if they don't look skeletal.

"Their image of the ideal woman has been honed down to a caricature," she said. "I find this attitude is insufferable — that every woman must starve in order to keep the wretched needle on the scale from climbing past the prescribed point."

Mrs. Reichman asked: "Who has set these arbitrary figures?

"The insurance companies? Charts that tell precisely what each height should be are bunk. No consideration is given to our bone structure, our physiognomy, our style, our mental health."

Mrs. Reichman weighs 200 pounds and is five feet, 8½ inches tall. Her 48-38-48, size-22 figure ripples with curves but no excess flab.

She keeps her body firm by walking three kilometres each morning and by exercising 15 minutes daily.

Mrs. Reichman has delved into history to attempt to prove that think-thin chauvinism is a contemporary and largely fraudulent phenomenon.

She said Cleopatra was said to be huge and that heads of European countries demanded and married fleshy wives.

"The Venus de Milo, the symbol of classical feminine beauty is a little over five feet," she said. "Yet her measurements are 37-27-38 with a 22½-inch thigh and almost a 13-inch upper arm."

She said that in more modern times, "Lillian Russell, one of the most celebrated beauties in history, was voluptuous."

"Diamond Jim Brady admired her for her boundless appetites. He would challenge her to fabulous eating contests, which she invariably won."

Burning Korchnoi Begs Off

BAGUIO CITY (AP) — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi suffering a slight sunburn from a beach outing, postponed the 29th game of the world chess championhip with Anatoly Karpov today.

Korchnoi's second, British grandmaster Raymond Keene, said Korchnoi got the burn Wednesday. "Viktor is not feeling well," said Keene's wife.

The game has been rescheduled for Saturday. It first was postponed Tuesday because a high-voltage transformer exploded.

Korchnoi now has used up the four postponements allowed each player for the first 32 games and must wait until after the 32nd game to ask for another delay. Karpov still has one postponement.

Salisbury Gloating Over Visas

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Government officials today gloated openly over the decision to allow Prime Minister Ian Smith to visit the United States.

Smith and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, a black member of Rhodesia's ruling executive council, were granted visas by the state department Wednesday to take up an invitation by 27 U.S. senators.

Smith plans to fly to South Africa Friday and proceed on to New York.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa and tribal Chief Jeremiah Chirau, the other two black leaders who sit with Smith on the executive council, will make the trip at a later date to avoid having the country's entire leadership away at the same time, a government statement said.

Sithole welcomed the state department's announcement, saying it shows a commitment to give the transitional government the same hearing as the leaders of the guerrilla-backed Patriotic Front.

"We are delighted that America has now decided on fair play," one government leader said.

Some white Rhodesians were not pleased that Smith will be allowed into the U.S.

"We're very perturbed," said Allan Savory, leader of a small white liberal party called the National Unifying Force. "We know how plausible Smith can be when facing people who don't fully know the Rhodesian scene. He gets away with so much."

Once Smith arrives, he will face Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who is expected to try to convince the Rhodesian leader of the futility of his own formula for an internal settlement.

"I think if we are to find a solution it is essential that we do hold an all-parties conference," Vance told reporters Wednesday after conferring with UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on a range of international issued.

U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young told reporters that the decision to grant a visa to Smith is "a luxury we can afford in our free society."

He predicted that Smith's visit to the United States would produce results exactly the opposite of those expected by his sponsors.

For one thing, Smith would be grilled by a free press that would discover he does not have "the media personality of a Pik Botha," Young said, referring to the South African foreign minister who, Young added, is an accomplished performer before cameras and microphones and at news conferences.

The senators who extended the invitation, most of whom describe themselves as conservatives, were led by Senator S.I. Hayakawa (Rep. Calif.), who said Smith and the black members of the transitional government deserve the right to tell their story in person to the government and people of the United States.

Senator Robert Dole (Rep. Kan.) said that story is one of "peaceful transition and democratic processes that will stand in stark contrast to the scenario outlined by the Marxist guerrilla forces."

Co-Ordinated Fraser Plan Urged

Canadian Press

A federal-provincial study of the Fraser River estuary calls for a co-ordinated river management plan involving all levels of government and the public.

The study says less than 30 per cent of the river is still in its natural state. More than one-third of the estuary has been lost to port and industrial development, while organic waste and toxic substances are building up in other portions of the estuary.

In a copy of the report seen by reporters, scientists comment: "Though the large volume of the Fraser River provided dilution capacity, concerns exist due to the effects of toxic chemicals as well as the increased loads of organic wastes on the aquatic environment."

The study steering committee calls for policy guidelines in the over-all river management plan to include restricted foreshore industrial development to industries who need direct water access; a limit to port and urban industrial expansion; protection of recreational areas and no further net loss of wetlands.

Four working groups — land use and transportation, recreation, habitat, water quality and policy and practices — had as their goal to "explore how the needs of the economy could be balanced with protection of the natural ecosystem of the Fraser estuary."

The recreation group found many shoreline recreational sites now frequently used are not protected through formal designation and they are inadequately managed.

"However, there is still time to avoid irreversible degradation of the remaining natural ecosystem while continuing to provide for the needs of the region's vital port and commercial activities," the study says.

The study's main recommendation calls for a three-level organization to manage the estuary.

An estuary council or small political group would make the major decisions on development versus environment on the river.

A second policy group will be made up of key federal-provincial government agencies and will attempt to reconcile conflicts and make recommendations to the political group.

The third level would be all other government agencies and public interest groups from which members of special study groups on the river would be drawn.

Environmentalists have said development on the river is largely controlled by the pro-industry harbor commissions and the provincial government, instead of the public.

Lawyers Begin Ad Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Law Society of British Columbia has mailed to its 4,500 members a much-amended referendum on advertising of lawyers' fees and preferred fields of practice.

And the North Vancouver lawyer who is challenging the society's right to prevent him from such advertising said Wednesday the wording of the referendum probably will give it a better chance of passing.

Don Jabour said the two questions are "a conservative first step, and perhaps more acceptable to lawyers undecided about it."

The first question is: Do you favor amendment of the (society's) rulings to permit members to advertise fees to the public, in print, provided such advertising is informational, and not promotional, misleading or deceptive?

The second question deals in the same terms with the issue of "preferred fields of practice."

Jabour said that limiting advertising to the print medium, thus presumably denying lawyers access to radio and television time, may be more acceptable to many lawyers.

The society's ruling body, the Benchers, spent much of last Friday afternoon amending the original referendum.

Liberals in Trouble

While the value of public opinion surveys is always doubtful, Wednesday's Gallup poll results must be seen as another indication that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau made a serious political error in not calling a federal general election earlier this year. The effects of this mistake will be seen in both the short and the long term and in no way can the Liberal party view things optimistically. Neither can Trudeau.

While the poll showed the Liberals still leading among decided voters, it also showed that this lead is slipping. The party dropped four percentage points in one month while Joe Clark's Tories and the New Democrats both made significant gains. In itself, this is no cause for alarm: Trudeau and his Liberals have recovered from similar setbacks in the past. What has got to be perturbing for the Liberals is the timing of this popularity slide — because time is one thing they do not have.

The immediate concern, of course, lies in the 15 byelections slated for Oct. 16. Should the Liberals do poorly, the party is not going to look forward confidently to a general election next year. Similarly, victories for the Conservatives or the NDP would serve as a welcome shot in the arm for parties which only months ago viewed the prospect of an election with something less than joy.

More important than the byelections and their possible effects, however, is the fact that the poll shows the Liberals now trailing the Tories in every province except Quebec. It would be bad enough for Trudeau to go into a general election with the image of loser, a man of fading popularity and diminishing strength. To enter the fight as leader of a party with little or no support outside Quebec would be even worse. And to win under such circumstances would surely be a travesty.

Imagine a prime minister backed only by Quebecers trying to deal on natural resources with Alberta, on wheat policies with the Prairies, on fishing limits with the Maritimes or British Columbia. Imagine a leader with such regional support dickering with the provinces on constitutional change. And imagine the hammer Rene Levesque would hold, knowing Trudeau did not have the backing of much of the country.

Trudeau has only himself to blame. His decision to waltz the voters around spring, summer and fall election dates has forced him into a corner. Now time has run out and the election date has virtually been set by default. Trudeau may indeed blame himself, but he will not be only one. The Liberal party will also be looking for a goat. And so will the voters.

A Few Freedoms

Police security authorities have an unquestioned mandate from the government and the people of Canada to keep a watching brief on groups which may threaten the state with violence, and that may involve surveillance of one kind and another.

Last Friday, the RCMP descended en masse on a summer camp near Montreal where a left-wing group was meeting. Almost 50 police piled out of unmarked cars and vans, blocked the road into the camp and spread out around the edge of the property with cameras and radio equipment. They were armed. They would not identify themselves. All afternoon they hung around, arresting no one and barring no one from leaving but clearly intimidating those attending just by their presence.

Lawyers for the Marxist-Leninist group, In Struggle, were unable to identify the police involved in the raid, and they got nowhere in calls to the RCMP and the Quebec Provincial Police. Calls that day to the office of the Quebec justice minister were not returned, but a spokesman said later [illegible] "an operation undertaken uniquely by the RCMP . . . considered normal" within the force's mandate.

Testimony before the royal commission on abuses by the RCMP indicated the Mounties have had difficulties in the past in keeping tabs on fringe groups which might be dangerous; it has had difficulty in recruiting informers, sometimes pressuring potential candidates by abducting them and threatening them by various means. That is clearly unacceptable to a democratic society.

So is, we suggest, the heavy-handed methods employed last weekend against a splinter group of Quebec leftists. Canadians are guaranteed a few freedoms still; the right to peaceful assembly and privacy are two the RCMP in Quebec might learn to respect.

VICTOR MACKIE

Crombie Leads in Rosedale

TORONTO — Two heavyweights are battling it out in Toronto's Rosedale constituency in a byelection contest that has been likened here to the recent Ali-Spinks fight.

David Crombie, 42, former mayor of Toronto, is the veteran Ali in the political brawl, while John Evans, MD, D.Phil., FRCP, 49-year-old former Toronto University president and a newcomer to politics, is cast in the Spinks role.

Evans, like Spinks, has a lot to learn. But he is learning fast, the hard way. It is a gruelling struggle he is engaged in and he will emerge a wiser but shaken man.

The odds are on Crombie to win by a substantial majority. The diminutive well-known ex-mayor in each bout appears to be scoring points almost daily in his favor. But Evans, fighting a strong anti-Trudeau and anti-government handicap, hasn't been knocked out yet.

Scoring Points

During his campaigning recently Evans called at the door of a prominent Liberal, who had a guest from Ottawa, preparing to leave. The guest opened the door.

Wearing his best campaign smile Evans struck out his hand and solicited support after explaining who he was. The guest was impressed by the man's appearance, handsome, clear-eyed, disarming and charming. The guest grinned, explained he did not live there and would not be voting in the Oct. 16 byelections. He presented the head of the house who had been in the kitchen mixing drinks.

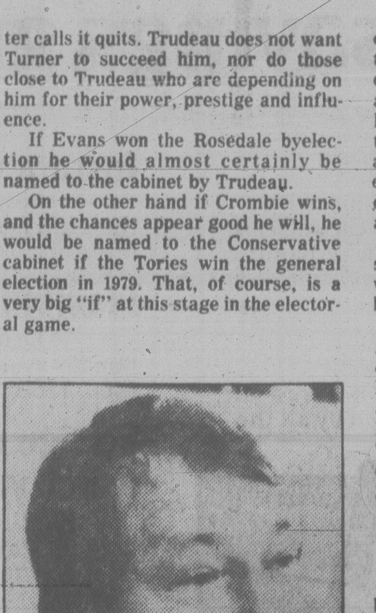
It turned out that Evans and the house head knew each other. They exchanged greetings.

The departing guest listened politely while the two talked about the progress of Evans' campaign. Preparing to leave he shook Evans' hand again and said he had a message to leave with the Liberal candidate: "I like you, but you're fighting a losing battle. You're being used by the prime minister, badly used." And he was gone.

He was giving voice to what is heard around Ottawa and in Toronto. Evans looked like a natural for electoral office in the flesh and on paper. He was courted by the Liberals, especially those close to Prime Minister Trudeau. They saw in him a possible future Liberal leader, a man who can turn aside John Turner, after the present prime minister calls it quits. Trudeau does not want Turner to succeed him, nor do those close to Trudeau who are depending on him for their power, prestige and influence.

If Evans won the Rosedale byelection he would almost certainly be named to the cabinet by Trudeau.

On the other hand if Crombie wins, and the chances appear good he will, he would be named to the Conservative cabinet if the Tories win the general election in 1979. That, of course, is a very big "if" at this stage in the electoral game.



DAVID CROMBIE
. . . veteran fighter

Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark is confident the Tories have a sure winner in Crombie. But Crombie is not counting on Clark to help him win. He doesn't need that help. He and his workers are selling Crombie to the voters. He is a mighty saleable package in this over-grown city of asphalt and concrete where the sun seldom shines out of the smog-laden sky.

Crombie was well liked as a mayor. He has a great appeal for the people. He was a mayor who provided public housing and fought big business.

He went out and spoke as John Diefenbaker's nominating convention in Prince Albert. This move was interpreted by some as a first step in a campaign to claim the Tory leadership. Crombie dismisses such suggestions as nonsense and declares his support for Clark as leader. His opponents in Rosedale have tried to use the Prince Albert trip against him, but without success. Diefenbaker is liked in Toronto whereas in other parts of the country he is regarded as a living legend.

Clark would be well advised to be seen with Diefenbaker more often. It would do him no harm and could help him. Crombie has found it helped him.

Rosedale is a mixed-up constituency. At one end live the well-to-do, at the other there are those who are hard up. In the poorer areas with the tenements and the high rise complexes the name of David Crombie is something special. The constituency is a microcosm of the city complete with WASPS, ethnic groups the rich and the poor.

Mixed-up Riding

The constituency has been poked and prodded by political scientists. They like to use it as a model of the country as a whole because it includes much of what makes up the Canadian society.

The New Democratic Party candidate is Ron Thomson,a lecturer and book editor in the Institute of Medieval Studies, York University. The older party workers tend to dismiss the NDPer as a token candidate. They say the main bout is between Evans and Crombie, which understandly arouses the ire of the NDP. If the NDP attracts support it will take it from Evans. It is determined to do better than in 1974 in anticipation of the coming general election and elections to come after that.

In the 1974 contest former finance-minister Don Macdonald, [illegible] there for 16 years as MP (first elected in 1962), won with 17,227 votes over his Conservative rival Hal Jackman, who collected 14,119. The NDP only got 3,285 votes in '74. The Conservatives have always done well in the wealthier areas of the riding and Crombie will also poll a lot of votes in the poorer areas where Macdonald collected support in the past.

What has the Conservatives worried in Rosedale is that so many people are taking it for granted that Crombie will win that they might turn out on polling day. He is emphasizing that to turn out Trudeau and all he represents they must turn out and vote.

Will they get the message? He is confident they will.

Naive, Yet Insightful

I wish to respond to your editorial of Sept. 20 entitled, somewhat in poor taste, Waving the Red Flag. I found the editorial to be a curious mixture of naivete and insight, and I feel that some amplification of the reasoning behind my remarks is clearly called for.

The members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union are dedicated public employees who are committed to providing the best possible service to the people of this province. We are not, therefore, given to making statements about the possibility of disruption in these services without compelling reasons.

Your editorial criticizes me for making statements now that the government's attitude may very well force us into a strike position next year if we are to retain our benefits and working conditions as well as keep up with inflation.

Yet the same editorial acknowledges that government actions have resulted in extremely low morale, that treatment of department of public works employees has been "little short of atrocious," and that several cabinet ministers have given "the BCGEU cause for concern."

Furthermore, we have been informed by our sister unions in other provinces that their governments have told them that the B.C. government has privately stated it is going "to get" the BCGEU next year. Just recently I was given a copy of a secret report outlining the results of meetings between the western provinces called to develop a common strategy in negotiating with provincial government employees.

In the face of all these recent developments, in light of a near-strike last year as a result of the government attempting to weaken our collective agreement, and given the continued hard line in labor relations matters taken by government representatives, I consider that the only responsible course of action is to bring these issues out into the light of day.

The BCGEU has always viewed the labor relations process in the public sector as a problem-solving one. Recently it has become a problem-creating process. We are anxious to solve our problems in a climate of mutual respect and wish to minimize as much as possible the public inconvenience that inevitably results from breakdowns in our efforts to have rational discussions with the government.

The current signs I see do not encourage me to be optimistic about our future negotiations at the bargaining table, and I frankly said so. However, the BCGEU is anxious that both the employer and union get back to the course of good labor relations. — John L. Fryer, General Secretary, B.C. Government Employees Union.

What About GAIN?

You made some points in your editorial about Mr. Vander Zalm's idea about yet another income plan for low income people (Don't Go It Alone, Sept. 25). Indeed what was GAIN supposed to be if not that?

And one of the reasons GAIN is not working too well is it has become bogged down with ever-changing rules and regulations and what appear to be a lot of people who seem to feel their only job is to cut as many people off as possible. I know, I was continually harrassed by such a person and I was cut off. As a result my income is now less than someone on welfare getting all the "extras" that welfare people do. I had the feeling that if there were not all these constantly changing regulations a lot of people wouldn't have any work to do!

And that's where these good ideas flounder — all the bureaucrats and civil servants that ensue.

Surely the idea of such an income is to help people not to constantly harrass them with "surveys," questions some of which are extemely personal and would turn the civil liberties people green! For example: "Who are you living with if anyone?" In my case the implication was that I might be shacked up with a man who would be supplying me with money. I am a middle-aged female. Discretion is something the questioners haven't heard of.

Also the regulations are blanket, covering people from 16 to 60. If you are 60 or more you may have more other income before you are ineligible. You may earn $100 a month or something, which is great if you are young, but I am not yet 60 and the result is that someone younger and in better physical condition than I who can earn some money stays on GAIN and I am cut off.

Certainly encourage younger and more fit people to earn some money but the regulations for us "in-betweens" are vague and nonexistent sometimes, so the cutoff.

I felt so continually harrassed and annoyed by my constant questioner with his phone calls and letters that it was a relief when he finally cut me off! However, financially, life is very difficult as a result! Is that Mr. Vander Zalm's idea of a good thing and a vote-getter? — Name witheld on request.

Red Herring

The letter Church and State (Times, Sept. 5) rouses a speculation:

Might not a better (and cheaper) solution to the need for adequate religious instruction for all B.C. children whose parents desire it be the allocation of a period during the school day when students would study their respective faiths under qualified teachers within our public school system itself?

This method would avoid costly duplication and release many church-oriented people from unnecessary obligations, so that they could deploy their energies, time and money more constructively.

For instance, into personal (and family) growth and development in their faith, ecumenical out-reach to one's neighbors, providing a supportive environment to deprived children in our midst, aid to and education about developing countries, personal involvement in programs for criminals, the handicapped, immigrants, the sick and shut-ins, as well as persons afflicted with sexual, drug, and alcohol abuse problems; not to mention study and meditation on the nature of politics, culture, the church, and economics.

Nine million dollars seems little enough for schools that thousands clearly want and have paid taxes for. There are many more millions of dollars assigned to our public school system which, granted, the majority of the public uses. But it should be made very clear that since the public includes various religious minorities, all of these are entitled to see their taxes go towards the education they want for the children entrusted to them.

The separation of church and state is a red herring. Canadians United for Separation of Church and State sounds like the crackpot dream of "no-popery" bigots. Or is it the cloud-cuckoo-land vision some Anglicans entertain of becoming the Church of Canada that has Mr. Kelsey and his CUS colleagues so uptight? — Robin Terry, 524 Dallas Roads.

Forest Policy

As a forestry critic who has contributed letters to Victoria's morning paper for nearly a year now, I am asked more and more why I do not send them to the Times also. The suggestions are flattering and show that there are a fair number of people concerned about our forest policy — or as I am trying to demonstrate, our lack thereof. However, rather than have duplicate articles in both papers, I would like to present another side of the issue to Times readers.

In the Colonist I have been trying to show that our present forest management policy is primarily "logging" oriented rather than "forestry"-oriented, and that the policy of allowing clear-cutting on 80 per cent of our logged areas is an economic decision, not a silvicultural one. This blanket policy is not only wasteful of much advanced second-growth timber often found in mixed stands, but that it forces us to resort to expensive tree planting rather than natural regeneration. Furthermore, clear-cutting steep slopes and slash-burning them create a destructive chain reaction on the forest soils and adjacent waterways.

These facts have been recognized by the Pearse royal commission and are made evident from many other sources. But the only reaction from the government has been to bring out a new Forest Act that does nothing to change a fundamental error, or backwardness, in foresty philosopy.

Technically, if we were practising good forest management there would be no reason for industry and conservationists to be on a collision course, and most certainly we would not be overcutting our forests at an alarming rate. The popular conclusion is to blame industry, but without definite silvicultural and economic guidelines, are they really at fault? I would like to tackle the silivicultural options that are open to us, and link them to the basic objectives of the conservation groups and at the same time argue for a broader economic forestry base than just growing timber. We can have our timber industry, economically stable forest based communities, unsilted salmon spawning streams, and ample forest recreation, through normal forest management.

If you do not think this is possible read the B.C. Forest Service free quarterly publication ForesTalk. It provides, in a very readable way, an excellent introduction to our forest management capabilities. Unfortunately it can not be a critic of its own department, its shortcomings and lack of silvicultural commonsense. And that is what I would like to try and bring out for public discussion. — D. M. Trew, 37-1240 Newport Avenue.

All Together Now

This letter is being written in defence of the "bawling babes" (Florence Wedge's letter to the editor, Sept. 25).

I am a teacher in my mid-20s and feel that I am at a point in life when I can scrutinize both sides of the question in an unbiased manner.

Personally, having sat in many churches I would rather hear the musical cry of a child than be subjected to the sound of hard peppermints being mauled between the dentures of a person who has never heard of Polident. While on this topic I might also mention that a baby's outburst is somewhat of an improvement over the nasal contributions of gramps as he drifts off to dreamland behind his prayer book!

Seriously though, wasn't it Jesus who said "Suffer little children to come onto Me"? And what about the quotation "A family that prays together, stays together"? I fully realize that a babe in arms hasn't the ability to pray, but studies show that a very small child is conscious of his enviroment from day one. What better enviroment than the house of or Lord?

Doesn't it make you feel good, Ms. Wedge, to see a whole family worshipping God? And isn't a baby's cry a bigger and better testimony of God's love and miracles than any sermon could ever be?

However, if my letter is just a lot of palaver in your opinion, Ms. Wedge, may I suggest (in retaliation), ear plugs and a course in lip reading?

But wouldn't it be better if we all just worshipped God together. Howlers, clackers and snorers included? — Miss Debra Jean Chalmers, 527 Foul Bay Road.

PEOPLE OF THE LAKE

What is human intelligence? and how has it evolved over thousands of years of human history? Few persons have dared answer these questions. The physical composition and intellectual content of the human brain remain mysteries except to those schooled in medical or psychological practice. But to the person interested in the origins of mankind and human behavior, exploring but a few mysteries of the human brain will lead to a better understanding of human intelligence and its evolution. Famed anthropologist and best-selling author Richard Leakey (Origins) now explores the fascinating nature of human intelligence in this fifth of a seven-part series from his new book People of the Lake: Mankind and Its Beginnings, co-authored by Roger Lewin.

The Nature of Human Intelligence

By RICHARD E. LEAKEY and ROGER LEWIN

Leakey with his skulls

To hold in one's hands the fossilized cranium of a long-dead ancestor is a strangely moving experience; this petrified link with the past cannot fail to stir emotions — simple curiosity, perhaps a strange unease — in even the least romantic breast.

The basic architecture of the hominid brain evolved a very long time ago; for at least three million years the brains of our Homo ancestors and their cousins have been distinctly different from apelike brains. We are forced therefore to peer far back into the past to see the first glimmerings of humanity, not just in the way our ancestors appeared to each other, but in what went on in their heads and also, presumably, in the way they behaved.

Inventive

What did the brains think when they were pulsating with blood? What life-style did they control for their owners?

They may seem odd questions to pose, but if we are to understand our evolutionary history, we must first ask why humans are so intelligent? Why are we so inventive and accomplished in the world of practical affairs?

The answer may at first appear to be glaringly obvious: because it makes us such a technologically successful animal. Undoubtedly, our command of technology places us at the pinnacle of the animal kingdom. But this is a circular argument. It is just as easy to argue that we are technologically accomplished because we are intelligent.

The point we have to settle in evolutionary terms is this: Was the undoubted advantage of sophisticated technology the primary driving force that created the intelligent human brain? Or, are we technological masters of our planet as a fortuitous consequence of needing to be intelligent for other less tangible reasons? It may be that during our evolutionary career we had to sharpen our wits, not so much to overcome the technological challenges faced in the practical world, but rather to handle the complexities of a uniquely intricate social life.

Our common ancestor Ramapithecus some fifteen to six million years ago was leading a life that demanded a different way of thinking from that of its contemporary apelike cousins. The business of walking around on two legs instead of four, of exploring new energy resources such as meat, and of coping with en evermore demanding social life made its impression inside the head of Ramapithecus as well as on its physical appearance.

Throughout their evolution, and right up to their final extinction about a million years ago, our primitive ancestors showed no signs of significant progress in the size of their brains. By contrast, Homo's brain got bigger and bigger: early Homo erectus about 1.5 million years ago had brains approaching 1,000 c.c.; by half a million years ago this had risen to perhaps 1,200 c.c.; and when fully modern human Homo sapiens evolved about fifty thousand years ago, their heads housed brains with an average of 1,400 c.c. During this time our ancestors grew in bodily stature too.

Although it is impossible to be sure about the size and weight of the early homonids, intelligent guestimates allow us to make tentative comparisons between the relative braininess of early Homo, and modern humans. Without going into data which anyway are far from ideal because of their inherent uncertainties, it is fair to say that the early hominids are within respectable striking distance of modern humans in the ratio of their brain and body weights; they were definitely less brainy than we are, but not dramatically so.

The chasm

If the advancement in relation to braininess between our primitive ancestors two million years or so ago and modern Homo sapiens today is not very dramatic, how do we account for the apparent behavioral and intellectual chasm that must separate us now?

The answer is humans became intelligent. We are exactly the same animal now as we were fifty millennia ago; we simply know more now.

The progressive evolution of the higher primate brain produced a machine that, through comparing incoming information from several sensory channels and then setting the results against information kept in a capacious memory store, could create a vibrant image of the world outside. It recognized objects as discrete entities rather than as simply part of a patchwork pattern. It could equate the furry appearance of a cat with a small animal that meows. And it projected events into the future as well as stored happenings of the past.

This is intelligence. But what is human intelligence?

One quality in the world that is appreciated only by the human mind is the passage of time, the notion that the world itself is constant and that our changing emotions and experiences are passing through it. A true perception of events in the outside world is impossible unless time is automatically built into the analysis of information about events that are happening in the outside world.

A second unique tool of human intelligence is spoken language. It is quite legitimate to view language as a very special tool for sharpening up still further the perceptual image of the world outside our heads. By naming objects, one can think more manipulatively about them. And by speaking about the images in our heads, we create a genuine shared consciousness in a way that is impossible without words.

Important though language is, both as a channel of communication and as equipment for thinking, the really special feature of the human brain is its use of language to question our place in nature. Intense intellectual curiosity is a hallmark of humankind.

This curiosity would be impossible without a true conscious awareness perfusing our minds. Awareness is a philosophical quality that can provoke endless debate. We can say that different classes of animals inhabit different perceptual worlds because of their different channels of sensory perception and machinery for processing it. But are they aware of their worlds? Are they aware of themselves as individuals within them?

Animals that lead relatively solitary lives, untouched by the unpredictable complexities of intense social interactions, would have little need of the quality of awareness of which we speak. Exactly where in the animal kingdom, awareness begins and ends is impossible to say. But in the less dramatic and more controlled atmosphere of the psychological laboratory, the ability of various higher primates to recognize themselves as individuals has been put to scientific test.

We should not now be too surprised to discover that chimps can recognize themselves in a mirror. Without a self-identity there would be no possibility of this kind of self-recognition. Beyond this, however, the rest of the primates see only another individual when faced with their reflections in a mirror: gibbons, mandrill and hamadryas baboons, spider monkeys, capuchins, several macaques, all fail to recognize their own image as themselves as judged by scientific experiment.

Awareness

Awareness here is a question of degree. As social creatures (for the most part anyway) these animals who failed the mirror test almost certainly have a higher level of awareness than, say, a frog. That their awareness doesn't stretch to the expression of self-awareness, or self-identity, while in chimps it does, reminds us perhaps that the human mind is at the extreme of a spectrum of biological qualities, and not, as some people would have us believe, the product of a special creation.

It helps to be consciously aware of the world in which you live if it is populated by individuals with whom you constantly interact. The argument is that the pressure of social life was an important engine in the evolution of intelligence, both in the higher primates and ourselves. The intensely enhanced social interaction was a crucial part of operating the mixed economy of gathering and hunting.

Being part of a group cooperating in different ways to achieve the same goal can be a very frustrating business, as anyone who has ever served on a committee certainly knows! Restraint, persuasion, tact, submission, aggression, perception, and a good sense of humor, all play their part in successful co-operation. And on top of all this is the desire — conscious and unconscious — to ensure that the system operates as it should, with no one gaining unfair advantage.

Once this system becomes embedded in a social animal it can quickly become highly complex, especially in an animal that communicates by a spoken language. During the course of natural selection individuals are certain to arise who (unconsciously) try to "cheat" in the game. They may produce convincing sham moralistic aggression, sham guilt, sham sympathy, and sham gratitude in an "attempt" to take more than they give.

Just as natural selection inevitably produces would-be cheaters, it will just as inevitably give rise to individuals capable of detecting cheating. And so the game of bluff and double-bluff begins, with the new emotions of trust and suspicion being invented.

The underlying framework of these and other emotions and motivations are then deeply embedded in the human mind as part of a social and economic system. Although there could have been no single force responsible for the extreme development of the human intellect — evolution rarely works in such a monolithic way — the demands of such social and economic intercourse provides a major thrust in the growth of the human brain.

Stimulus

Over the past million years human social interaction, and probably technological innovation, too, rose to such a pitch that it generated its own stimulus for further evolution. As we began more and more to shape the world around us, to impose our will on it, we gradually became a truly cultural animal. Our ancestors invented culture, and as it grew stronger and richer it provided a unique environment which was to nurture the human mind to the point at which we know and experience it today.

Gas Firms Wave Flag

By DOUGLAS FISHER

"Ask, and you will receive; seek, and you will find; knock, and the door will be opened." Matthew 7:7.

OTTAWA — The above quotation, though from a spiritual context, struck me as apt in a worldly way when I read the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada's recent submission to the National Energy Board.

The IPAC asks permission to export more natural gas to the U.S. It seeks benefits for Canada and Canadians. It knocks on the NEB's door to get that permission. There is, however, a tinge of deception in the report, and a paradox lurks over it.

Canada being Canada, business has had to learn to accommodate the quirky political requirements of our governments. Private gain and growth, rightly or wrongly, are dirty topics. The nation's welfare is much more wholesome. To play the game, especially in natural resource matters, business mustn't mention growth and profits. It must instead wave the flag. The IPAC waves it well.

What would increased export quotas mean for Canada? First, says the IPAC, there would be an incentive to explore and to discover more gas which in turn would ensure adequate natural gas supplies for Canadians in the future. Second, the money from exports would help keep domestic gas prices down. Third, more exports would create more than 25,000 jobs here. Fourth, our external trade deficit would become a small surplus. Fifth, Canadian industry could continue to use cheaper residual fuel oils and our refineries would be busier. And sixth, if we fail to export more to the U.S., others will. We'll have the surplus and none of the benefits. Take it or leave it said the IPAC, but Canada can't afford to leave it. Neither can the IPAC's 320 member companies if the export market is that good.

Natural gas is a limited resource. There is only so much in the ground and when it's gone, it'll be gone forever. That day may be very far off, yet to read this submission one would think the day will never come.

The IPAC takes refuge in the present. The first point of its summary is that "There is a growing recognition that the ultimate gas reserves of the three western provinces are much greater than previously accepted . . . (the) excess of supply over demand of about 221 billion cubic feet per year does not include the substantial reserves which are presently not under contract."

Just three years ago, however, the consensus was gloomy. As the IPAC states, "In April, 1975 . . . the (NEB) concluded that there was a probability of insufficient near-term supplies of gas to cover fully both the quantities of gas licensed for export and the quantities required to meet increasing Canadian demand." So exports were curtailed and a push made for more exploration, funded by a bigger share of the money for the companies.

My point would be not that we shouldn't export the newly discovered "substantial surplus of already developed gas," but that the IPAC doesn't seem to see the paradox involved. It says the answer isn't to set aside the surplus for our future. That would hurt the industry, and thus the country, by forcing it to slow down. Instead we should accept the paradox.

In the long-run we'll have no natural gas but we must think in the short-run and keep charging full-tilt towards that gas-dry future. It helps if we avoid wondering whether the IPAC's newly hopeful forecast could be confounded by future circumstances as was the NEB's earlier gloomy outlook.

Sex and the Runner

By ART SPIKOL
The Runner Magazine

Running can make you impotent.

Remember, you read it here.

The statement isn't true, of course. Most people will tell you just the opposite: that running will make you sexier. And several of the many books devoted to running make similar claims.

That was about all I knew when I started running. A friend who looked noticeably better than ever told me she'd been running — and that she felt healthier, more in control of her body, firmer, sexier.

Armed with that limited information, I went out to run. It was cheaper than tennis, I didn't need a reservation, and I did need more exercise. I thought I would run about half as far as I could, then turn around and come back. If you've never run before, it's very difficult to estimate just how far half as far as you can run is. I ran almost a mile. I didn't pace myself. I didn't do any stretching exercises. I didn't know about such things as running shoes. I only knew that I was going to run and become healthier, more in control of my body, firmer, sexier. People looked at me as I passed them — gasping, flushed and soaked with perspiration — and wondered whether to call an ambulance. [illegible] know that this was merely the look of a very sexy guy getting in control of his body.

The first day I ran, I almost died.

"Why are you doing this?" Linda, my wife, asked as I fell through the front door, staggered to the stairway and pulled myself up to the shower, step by step.

I went on like that for over a week. I would go out and run and come back and shower and drink a half gallon of liquid and then, satisfied, I would fall asleep wherever I was. Even standing up. Linda would awaken me when it was time for bed. "Hey, sexy," she'd call, shaking me, and then she'd help me up the stairs. "I don't know how you run," she would say, "but you walk like a cripple."

Reading about it helped. I learned there were special shoes to be bought, special exercises to be done, pacing and pulse-watching. Depending upon whose book I read, I found that it was desirable to run through the pain until it disappeared, or that it was not, or that it depended upon the kind of pain. Once in a while I would apparently run through the wrong kind of pain, and I would spend the next five days wincing if I so much as ran to catch the phone. I did not look like a superjock.

"Listen," my wife pleaded, "you're sexy enough. If you get any sexier, you'll be paralyzed from the waist down."

If you have somebody like that around the house, you're going to become a little less responsive.

"Where are you going? To run again?"

"Yeah. The shorts and running shoes give me away?"

"It's after nine. I'm worried . . ."

"Don't be silly," I said. "I can outrun any mugger."

"Oh? You think muggers can't run? My God, there are probably muggers who run marathons in their spare time. They don't have full-time jobs, you know; they can practise all they want . . ."

"Apparently," I told her, "you've never read the demographics on runners."

The fact is, running clears out your head, tones and tightens your body, improves your cardiovascular system, makes you feel generally better, more confident, more in control of your body. And any or all of these may make you feel sexier. But there is no study that has ever been done that indicates that runners actually are sexier. In fact, quite the contrary: you only have so much to give, and once you've given it to the roads, you have to wait until you get it back again. Although the increase in stamina is amazing. I had been doing 25 pushups a day before I started running; after two months of it I was doing 75 almost as easily as I'd done 25. I could actually see and feel the changes.

One night after I'd been running and felt particularly good, I came home, showered, put on a pair of snug briefs and bounced down the stairs, flexing everything. Linda was on the living room sofa.

"Hi," I said, trying to appear nonchalant.

"Hi," she said. "Why are you standing there in your underwear holding your breath?"

"You don't notice anything different?"

"Lemme see. You got a haircut?"

"Come on. The legs are like steel. The thighs are like wood. If Rolls Royce made men instead of cars, I'd be a Silver Cloud. Everything is tight, firm, hard, in control." Sexier I promised and sexier I delivered.

"Fine. Let's go to bed," she winked. "Running is finally going to pay off."

"Not tonight. Sorry."

"What's wrong? Too tired?"

"Nope."

"Headache?"

"Nope."

"Then what?"

"I'm running a five-miler this weekend," I said, "and I don't mess around with women while I'm in training."

today's markets

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a small gain in an erratic session today, struggling in the face of some adverse inflation news.

Gainers held a broad lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market had built up some forward momentum in a late wave of buying Wednesday, when the Dow posted a 6.06-point gain.

But the government reported that the wholesale price index of finished goods jumped 0.9 per cent in September.

Brokers noted that that figure — equal to a 10.8 per cent annual rate — tended to dampen whatever hopes for a break in inflationary pressures had been aroused by a 0.1 percent decline in the index during August.

After a weak start, the market jumped ahead at mid-day, only to begin retreating again.

Cox Broadcasting jumped 9½ to $59 on word that the company and General Electric planned merger talks.

GE shares eased ¼ to $52¾.

active mid-afternoon trading.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 3.17 million shares, up from 2.75 million at the same time Wednesday.

Advances outnumbered declines 240 to 150 with 218 issues unchanged.

Trading remained halted in shares of M. Loeb Ltd., last at $7⅝, pending an announcement expected Friday.

Hollinger Mines Ltd. declined and Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd. was unchanged following brief halts for dissemination of news of special dividend payments.

Hollinger Class A shares dropped 1 to $42 on the sale of 700 shares with news that a special $1 dividend will be paid in addition to its regular quarterly payment of 51.52 cents.

Labrador Mining was up ¾ to $44 on 325 shares before the announcement of a $3 special dividend in addition to its regular 62.96-cent payment.

Numac Oil and Gas climbed 1¼ to $30⅝.

New Industrial Strategy Stressed

SARNIA (CP) — An industrial strategy is necessary if Canada hopes to overcome its present economic crisis, a former chairman of the Science Council of Canada said Wednesday.

Josef Kates said many groups, such as the C. D. Howe Institute, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and banks, now are advocating industrial strategies because of the critical economic situation.

"Some major re-direction of policy is required and government must play a major role in that re-direction," Kates told the economic and business management division of the Chemical Institute of Canada.

He said much of the strategy should come from the government and should be worked out at the cabinet level, adding that government for too long has been regarded by industry as uncertain in its intent toward industrial development.

Kates said the strategy should stress innovation and the development of new technology and should establish a greater level of co-operation between the private and public sectors.

FIRST CITY TRUST. THEN THE OTHERS.

We were born in the rugged oil country of Edmonton—but we weren't a first. We helped build thousands of dreams throughout Canada—but we weren't a first. We successfully pursued ever new channels of financial service—but we still weren't a first. ☐ It wasn't until now, in fact, that the company you've known as City Savings & Trust became… First City Trust. Why the change? Before the Judge

Judge Fred Green said in provincial court Wednesday he was sympathetic but found a Saanich driver guilty of assaulting another motorist.

Jack Nelson Warnock, 2336 Arbutus, was convicted of common assault but given a conditional discharge and three months probation by Green, who said the victim was the author of his own misfortune.

On March 9, Warnock was driving east on Tillicum past a shopping centre when a car pulled out behind him.

Upset over Warnock throwing a cigarette butt out the window, the young driver began honking his horn and gesturing with a finger at Warnock until the two vehicles reached Tillicum and Burnside.

At the intersection, Warnock stopped, stepped out of his car and walked back to the young man. Warnock testified he asked the driver if there was something wrong with his (Warnock's) car and what the upward motion of the middle finger meant.

The victim made comments about "people throwing garbage all over the countryside," and was subsequently struck by Warnock, who testified he only reacted to a move by the other driver by throwing both his arms in an upward and outward motion.

In finding Warnock guilty, Green said he was satisfied there had been an assault and that there can be no excuse for physical violence even though Warnock was not without provocation.

While the victim was the author of his own misfortune, Green concluded, it did not condone Warnock's action.

A 19-year-old woman who scratched a police officer who was arresting her husband was fined $100.

Judge William Ostler also placed Christine Lynn Smith, 1231 Blanshard, on six months probation and ordered her to accept any Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society counselling directed by her probation officer.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court the couple was involved in an altercation with others at the Century Inn beer parlor Sept. 13 and was ordered to leave by city police.

Shortly after, Mulligan continued, the couple re-entered and was requested again to leave by police.

At that point, Mrs. Smith interfered with the officers who were arresting her husband and one officer was scratched.

A 21-year-old Nanaimo man who was 22 days short of completing a one-year probation was handed a 14-day jail term.

Dempsey Mack Willie, 361 Shepherd, pleaded guilty to theft of two necklaces and a wallet Tuesday afternoon from Woolworth's.

Mulligan said Willie placed the items, valued at $8.69, in his jacket pocket and left the store without paying. He had just over $1 in his possession at the time.

Willie was convicted of breaking and entering and theft, in Victoria on Oct. 26, 1977, and was given a suspended sentence and one year's probation.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Richard Wesley Higgs, 19, of 3951 Bethel, $500; George Henry Cottyn, 59, of 2848 Cotlow, $500; Veral Reginald Lanes, 52, of 2336 Otter Point, $500; Voldemars Rasa, 47, of 971 Arundel, $450; David Clare McCallum, 30, of 206 Oswego, $400; Ricki Michael Smith, 28, of 726 Carkhall, $400; and Douglas Robert Underwood, 23, of 2660 Mount Newton Cross Road, $50.

Judge Rapped, Ordered Off Mortgage Act Case

A Duncan provincial court judge has been criticized on two counts by a B.C. Supreme Court justice who prohibited him from having anything more to do with a case.

Justice Patricia Proudfoot granted the application by Fairview Management Ltd. and Terrance Albert Smith against Judge Lance Heard.

Proudfoot said Heard "did not exercise his discretion judicially" when he reset a trial date on May 29 for June 1 when he had given an adjournment until September only five days earlier.

Even if Heard wasn't in error on this count, she said, "he most surely denied the accused the right to make full answer defence by proceeding without counsel on June 1, 1978."

The matter involved charges laid under the Mortgage Brokers Act. Details were not given in Proudfoot's judgment, filed at the Vancouver and Victoria courthouses.

She said a trial date of June 1 was set in February, but defence counsel, finding that a county court jury trial might prevent him from meeting the June 1 date, had the matter brought forward to May 24 to adjourn the trial date.

The prosecution opposed the adjournment request, but Proudfoot said it was clear the matter was adjourned to Sept. 18-19.

On May 26, the prosecution asked another provincial court judge, Fred Giles, to reset the trial date for June 1, but he didn't deal with it and adjourned the matter to May 29 to come before Heard.

Heard then reset the trial date to June 1, referring to additional evidence as his reason. But Proudfoot said that Crown counsel, questioned by her when the petition was heard in Supreme Court in Victoria Sept. 6, "admitted that all the information that was put to Judge Heard on May 29 was available on May 24.

"It is important to note that on June 1, 1978, Heard proceeded with the trial. Three witnesses, described as key witnesses, were called by the Crown. The accused was not represented and, needless to say, no cross-examination took place," she said.

She pointed out that few similar charges had been laid, making it less likely that anyone would be totally familiar with the legislation.

She said a second summons, which seemed to be the one before the court May 29, had already been dealt with on May 24 when the initial information was before the court.

"The Crown could simply not issue summons with gay abandon as they seem to have done in this case and thus get themselves before the court again on . . . the same matter," she said.

"I find this whole matter somewhat incredible. It is difficult to understand just how a relatively simple, straightforward proceeding as an application for adjournment, albeit opposed, could become so involved.

"After perusing all the documents filed, the transcripts which were supplied to me, and considering the arguments by counsel, I have no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that Judge Heard did, indeed, act without jurisdiction on May 29, 1978. His discretion was not judicially exercised. Simply, he sat in appeal on himself and reversed himself.

"It seems to me that the Crown, not being successful in their opposition to the application for adjournment on May 24, 1978, and deciding to proceed in the fashion as they did, they do so at their peril.

"Furthermore the problem was compounded by Heard's proceeding with the trial on June 1 with no defence counsel present. This action was clearly a denial of natural justice. The Court of Appeal has made the position quite clear regarding the necessity of legal counsel at a trial and, more particularly, where there are complexities existing such as there might very readily be here when dealing with legislation seldom used, such as the Mortgage Brokers Act."

She said the matter had been dealt with May 24 and the further application May 29 to reset the trial should not have been entertained.

Girl Facing Fire Charges

A 13-year-old faces charges in connection with a fire that caused about $15,000 damage to a house in Saanich Monday night.

A Saanich police spokesman said Wednesday the girl was taken into custody following an investigation into the fire at 3166 Albina.

Fire Chief Art Fryer said the fire was started by a smouldering cigarette placed on a bed.

RIDE & POWER:
The Chevette won't ride like a Datsun 210, because it doesn't have the 210's independent front, 4-link coil rear suspension. And it's power to weight ratio is less than that of the 210.

MANOEUVERABILITY & MODEL CHOICE:
The Omni and Horizon can't turn in the 210's 32.8 ft. circle. And they only offer 2 different body styles versus 4 for the 210.

COMFORT & CARGO ROOM:
You get 3.0" more legroom in a new 210 than the 40.0" in Corolla. And Corolla's cargo area is less than the roomy 9.0 cubic feet in the 210.

All 79 Datsuns are covered by the Datsun 6 Year Anti-Rust Plan.

ECONOMY:
The VW Rabbit can't match the low 6.9 litres per 100 kilometres* gasoline economy of the new Datsun 210. And it can't match 210's prices either.

WHERE OTHER ECONOMY CARS LEAVE OFF, THE '79 DATSUN 210 KEEPS RIGHT ON GOING.

The Datsun 210 — new for '79. Put it all together for yourself. Sit in it. Stretch out. You'll find you have more head and shoulder room than you'd have in a GLC.

Ride in it. With an independent front suspension, a 4 link coil rear suspension, and wider track, you'll be enjoying a much smoother ride than you'd have in either a GLC or a Chevette. Park it. You'll need a lot less turning space for this than you'd need for an Omni or Horizon. Drive it. You'll go at least 150 kilometres* further on a tank of gasoline than you would in a VW Rabbit.

The new Datsun 210 comes with an impressive list of standard features, too. And Datsun dares to put its six year anti-corrosion policy in writing. The new Datsun. See it at your local dealer.

Campaign-Style Speech by Bennett

FORT ST. JAMES (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett continued to keep provincial election speculation alive Wednesday night as he delivered another campaign-style speech while on a rail tour of British Columbia.

Speaking to about 300 residents of this northern B.C. community, he outlined the state of the economy, emphasized the province's booming tourist business and reiterated the need for increased homeowner grants.

Earlier Wednesday, in the central B.C. city of Prince George, Bennett said that an across-the-board increase in the provincial homeowners grant will be introduced at the next session of the legislature. He refused to reveal further details.

He said the grant is the best method of alleviating taxation because it provides a basic exemption which will give the greatest relief for those in medium-priced homes.

The last increase in the homeowner grant was in the April 10 budget which raised it by $30 to $280. Homeowners over 65 years of age get $480.

Bennett said he is concerned that Supreme Court of Canada decisions affecting resource royalties may be a threat to provincial rights.

"If that's the case, then we'll fight it."

He said the court's rulings Tuesday on Saskatchewan's potash industry "will be a good subject for us to discuss at the first ministers' conference."

While in Prince George, three B.C. Rail employees confronted the premier to ask for his help in avoiding possible strike action on the Crown-owned railway.

The men said they want middle management removed from negotiations and top BCR executives to replace them in current contract talks. BCR workers have voted in favor of strike action but have not yet issued strike notice.

Although Bennett was well-received here, the audience wanted answers to northern problems such as increased gasoline costs, recurring labor-management problems on the B.C. Railway and native Indian land claims.

The premier didn't supply any answers but did leave behind a $30,000 provincial resource-sharing cheque.

Bennett and his entourage moved north to Fort St. John today.

Barrett: The Same Old Song

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, addressing the International Woodworkers of America convention Wednesday, fired verbal broadsides at many of his longstanding targets — Premier Bill Bennett and the Social Credit government, the oil companies, the banks, MacMillan Bloedel, the federal Liberals and Conservatives and the local daily newspapers.

Barrett, who has repeatedly challenged Bennett to a televised debate, directed several remarks to the absent premier, who is on a rail tour through central British Columbia.

"I have a message for the premier: If you're going to call an election, get on with it.

"If you're not, then shut up and call a fall session of the legislature. Or are you too frightened to call us back to Victoria?

"I'm not going to call an election. The last time I did, I wasn't satisfied with the result." Barrett and the incumbent New Democratic Party were defeated by the Socreds at the polls in early 1976.

He called for public ownership of the oil and natural gas companies to stop the flow of their profits out of Canada. Canada could buy them out with the $2 billion Ottawa is spending annually to bolster the faltering dollar, he said.

"Bennett is telling you to get off your backsides . . . while the banks aren't suffering one iota.

"The banks haven't increased their productivity. They are taking it right out of your pockets and they have the nerve to tell you to sweat some more."

Sterling Deal Collapses

TORONTO (CP) — An agreement to purchase Sterling Newspapers Ltd. of Vancouver by Maclean-Hunter Ltd. has collapsed because agreement could not be reached on the purchase price, the companies said Wednesday.

Agreement in principle on the transaction was announced in August, although no price was revealed.

Conrad Black of Toronto said he and his partners, David Radler and Peter White, had negotiated on the basis of a price of $14 million, but he said Maclean-Hunter's move to reduce this to $12.5 million "meant there would be no sale to them."

Sterling had agreed in principle to sell nine daily newspapers, nine weekly newspapers and two twice-weekly newspapers plus printing facilities.

Kidnappers Muffed Orders

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kidnappers holding a bank manager's wife locked in a trunk might have muffed their chance to pick up the $100,000 cash ransom because of silly drop instructions, British Columbia Supreme Court was told Wednesday.

Kenneth Haley, husband of kidnap victim Heather Haley, testified the instructions were silly, vague and premature but he carried them out and when it was all over he still had the $100,000 — and his wife.

The court was told Mrs. Haley, mother of two children, opened the front door of their Delta dwelling May 12 when a man and a woman arrived with a black steamer trunk which they said an antique store had instructed them to deliver.

She told them she had not ordered one, allowed their request to enter and use her telephone to get the right address, was suddenly grabbed, bound, gagged and blindfolded and stuffed in the trunk.

They took her away in the van they arrived in, held her for nearly four hours in the trunk before releasing her in an east end lane shaken after her ordeal but physically unharmed.

Haley, manager of a Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch in Vancouver, testified he was ready for the ransom calls when they came to his office. He said he had been alerted by a phone call from a neighbor at home and had called all police departments.

He testified police told him to stall for time and were at his elbow and listening to the calls when they arrived.

The bank manager said he was prepared to wait for another hour — as instructed by the kidnappers — for the next call. But it came much sooner.

"The phone rang and a male voice said 'Adanac and Georgia. There's an alley. Make the drop in 15 minutes' and hung up," said Haley.

Adanac and Georgia streets run parallel a block apart, with a lane between them, but do not intersect. Haley said he drove to the Adanac Georgia area, looked around, and placed a package containing $100,000 behind a telephone pole in the lane between the streets.

"Eventually we decided they were just not going to pick it up (the $100,000 cash ransom). So I went back to the same place and got it and brought it back to the bank."

Then he received a call from his wife saying she had been freed.

The hearing continues.

Hospital Smoke Ban Closes CNIB Canteen

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A ban on cigarettes at the Royal Columbian Hospital has forced the permanent closure of the hospital's canteen run by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB), says Wendy Mikkonen, an employee at the canteen for eight years.

"The sale of cigarettes is the main money maker and without this item, the CNIB stall couldn't stay in business," Mikkonen, 27, said Tuesday.

"I don't smoke myself but I think the hospital decision is ridiculous because people have their rights and if they want to smoke they should."

She said cigarettes accounted for 70 per cent of the sales of the canteen.

Robert MacAdam, hospital assistant administrator, said the cigarette ban was imposed because the hospital did not want to be involved in the sale of materials that are dangerous to health.

Two others who worked with Mikkonen also lost their jobs. They are all blind, she said, and have not been able to find new work.

Mikkonen said the CNIB has no other work available and she has had no success in her application to Canada Manpower for assistance.

"They said jobs for people with our handicap should be provided by the CNIB," she said. "And the CNIB feels that search for work is up to Manpower, which leaves us in the middle of nowhere."

Shoreline Policy Urged by Scientist

A University of Toronto environmental scientist said in opening a national shore management symposium here Wednesday he hopes the conference leads to the establishment of Canada's first over-all shoreline policy.

F.K. Hare, director of the university's Insitute for Environmental Studies, said in his keynote address that Canada needs a single national policy rather than competing ones in each of the provinces if adequate protection is to be provided to the country's valuable shorelines on oceans, lakes and rivers.

He said achieving a national policy will be a long, drawn-out process and in the meantime work should be done to better co-ordinate the efforts of scientists and politicians.

Hare said in spite of the efforts of various science ministries and councils, Ottawa is not usefully applying the knowledge acquired by science.

"Our department of fisheries and environment is full of sore-headed scientists who feel rightly that their efforts to protect and enhance Canada's natural endowment are poorly used, poorly supported and little appreciated by official Ottawa."

Hare said he does not entirely blame politicians for the problem but rather "our collective Canadian uncertainty as to what we really want from our shorelines."

Hare made his comments at the opening of the two-day conference of scientists, researchers, civil servants and politicians from across the country.

The conference is sponsored by the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers.

$75,000 Retarded Cheque

A $75,000 cheque from provincial lottery funds was presented Wednesday to the Cedar Lodge Society to assist in the construction of the Cobble Hill Village for the mentally retarded.

The grant is part of the $221,000 approved by the Human Resources ministry for the project earlier this year.

The village officially opened Sept. 10.

The ministry also funds the society to operate the Cedar Lodge Residential Centre at Cobble Hill for the care of 40 children aged eight to 15 with neurological damage or learning disabilities.

The village will consist of four homes on a 50-acre site, housing up to 40 mentally retarded residents and 16 staff.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm who attended the cheque-presentation ceremony said the village is based on facilities used successfully in Britain, the U.S., France, Germany, Holland and Switzerland.

The aim of the village is self-sufficiency and independency for residents.

Staff, referred to as co-workers, live with the residents. Activities will include small-scale farming, animal husbandry and crafts.

SUSPENDED TEACHER PAID

COQUITLAM (CP) — Dennis Hilton, an auto mechanics teacher in this Vancouver suburb who was suspended twice by the local school board, will get $6,000 in back pay, school board chairman Eunice Parker said Wednesday.

She said the board has no option under the Public Schools Act but to pay Hilton, 29, for the four months he was suspended.

Trustees first removed Hilton because he was found guilty of a marijuana offence and given a conditional discharge. Hilton was later reinstated, then suspended for failing to report to work.

Acting on legal advice, the board has reinstated Hilton again but was criticized by Education Minister Pat McGeer who says school regulations give boards the power to dismiss any teacher even remotely connected with smoking marijuana.

Victim Was Brother's Girlfriend: Accused

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Russel Raymond Rafuse, 21, testified Wednesday that the woman he is accused of murdering was his older brother's girlfriend.

Rafuse is charged with second-degree murder in the stabbing death of Virginia Alice Sjoberg, 24, of Burnaby, Sept. 25, 1977.

He testified that on the night of the murder he had met Sjoberg in a hotel beverage room and they left together.

"I was just going to go home," he said. "She (Sjoberg) asked me to pick up a case of beer and come over to her place."

They went to her apartment and sat in the kitchen talking and drinking beer, he said. Then they went into the living room and talked for awhile.

She got up and went into her bedroom, he said, and he followed.

Rafuse said Sjoberg asked him to get into bed with her.

"I kind of wanted to go to bed with her," he said, "but the idea that she was my brother's girlfriend was going through my mind."

He said the woman criticized his lack of sexual performance and he became embarrassed and confused. He said Sjoberg accused him of being a homosexual.

"She started calling me names. I was getting kind of mad."

"All of a sudden she slapped me," he said. "I don't know what happened. I just went wild."

Strike Over

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 120 employees at Phillips Cable Ltd. voted Wednesday night to accept the company's latest offer and end their strike which began five months ago.

Peter Cameron, regional vice-president of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, said members will receive an average over-all increase of 18.5 per cent.

Yiddish Nobel Winner

other writer got it. So, the prize while it's pleasant to get it, it doesn't prove, really, so much because some of the greats didn't get (it)."

For the second year in a row, the most prominently mentioned candidates for the prize—including British novelist Graham Greene and Turkish writer Yasar Kemal—lost out. Last year's winner was Spanish poet Vincente Aleixandre, 78, little known outside the Spanish-speaking world.

Singer has written a dozen novels, collections of short stories, memoirs and children's books.

His best-known works include the family-chronicle trilogy of novels, The Family Moskat (1950), The Manor (1967) and The Estate (1969).

Other well-known Singer works are In My Father's Court (1966), The Magician of Lublin (1961), The Spinoza of Market Street (1961), A Friend of Kafka (1970) and A Crown of Feathers in 1973.

His stories often appear in The New Yorker magazine.

Singer, born near Warsaw in 1904, was the product of a strict religious upbringing and attended the Warsaw Rabbinical Seminary for seven years. Then he broke with the wishes of his parents and followed the path of an older brother, I. J. Singer, to become a secular author, writing for Yiddish and Hebrew journals in Poland beginning in the mid-1920s.

NIELSEN MUST GO: PROTESTERS

About 60 demonstrators called Wednesday for Environment Minister Jim Niesen's resignation, saying he opened the doors for further industrial development on the Cowichan Estuary.

There have been claims Nielsen interfered with the 22-member task force studying land use on the Cowichan River mouth, but Nielsen and members of the task force deny this allegation.

Nielsen refused to meet with the demonstrators as they paraded in front of The Empress. He said they could see him by calling his office and making an appointment.

Driver Penalties Not Working: Gregory

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory said today B.C.'s penalty points system for driving offences just isn't working.

"The intention of the system when it first came out was to suspend drivers' licences after they had collected 10 demerit points," Gregory said.

"But we are finding people with over 100 demerit points still in possession of their licence."

A report by Vancouver city engineer William Curtis and Vancouver police chief Don Winterton says the point system is not an effective deterrent to traffic violations.

The report said offenders accept tickets with no sense of immediate penalty although they might have to pay higher auto insurance bills later.

The report recommends a system of points and fines like that in Ontario.

However, Gregory feels a dual system is only a second-best option.

"I think suspending licences of bad drivers would work if it was enforced immediately at the court level upon conviction."

He said the Motor Vehicle Branch hasn't been able to keep up with suspensions because the backlog has swamped the process.

Curtis said he has no statistical evidence but added "in my gut I know that the penalty points system doesn't deter drivers."

The Insurance Corporation of British Columbia says penalty points generated about $7.2 million in higher premium revenues for the corporation in the year ended Feb. 28.

That's an average of $65 — equivalent to about eight penalty points — for each of the 110,000 B.C. drivers who paid penalties. Drivers can accumulate up to five penalty points without having to pay more money when car insurance is renewed.

Points are assessed according to the severity of the offence. The penalty is based on the number of points squared and the maximum is $400 or 20 times 20.

Taxes Break On Colleges

KELOWNA (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer said Wednesday that funding of post-secondary institutions will change and relieve property owners of the burden of financing them.

The new financial formula will see monies allocated to colleges through academic and occupational training councils, he said. The councils will be established following proclamation of the Colleges and Provincial Institutes Act, expected within a week.

McGeer, speaking to Okanagan College administrators, college council, faculty and students, said he hoped colleges will be operating under the act, which replaces the Public Schools Act for Colleges, in 1979.

Monies will come from government general revenue, the councils' student fees and any public bequests, he said, not the education ministry. Under the act, colleges will be designated independent corporations and will hold title to lands and physical facilities.

Okanagan College principal Ron Jeffels said McGeer told him an equivalent or greater amount of money will be available to colleges.

Colleges have been operating under an amendment to the Public Schools Act. About 18 months ago, the education ministry undertook a study on governing colleges and the current legislation is a result of the study.

Car Builder Revving Up On '34 Ford Roadsters

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

ANDREW Timmis doesn't look, dress or talk like your average auto industry tycoon.

But he's the owner, president, production chief, designer and head mechanic of the largest automobile assembly plant in Canada west of the Great Lakes.

His modest factory in a converted Victoria warehouse is now building a line of cars which he hopes will carve out a lucrative chunk of the fast-growing market for reproduction antique cars, and embellish the reputation he has already acquired in this field.

Right now the cars don't look too exciting, little more than a line of fiberglass shells sitting on chassis which are in turn mounted on concrete blocks.

But by Christmas the finished product should be ready for delivery — 10 gleaming, elegant, authentic-to-the-last-detail 1934 Ford roadsters.

Timmis, 31, a car fanatic from as far back as he can remember, says he has been working toward this goal for 10 years.

Before production even started this spring, with a team of six employees, he had spent a solid year in preparation and planning — tracking down parts and materials, lining up suppliers and seeing to a thousand other details.

He's reluctant to talk about the financial aspects of his venture, other than to concede there's a lot of money invested and that he has had some assistance from the B.C. Development Corporation.

Although Timmis won't give any indication how much the cars will be sold for, a Victorian with experience of the antique car market says the price would be a minimum of around $20,000.

Whatever the figure, the car maker appears to have little doubt there will be customers ready to pay — most if not all of them in the U.S.

In all Timmis has made 21 versions of the Ford roadster on a one-at-a-time basis, but this is his first foray into mass-production reproduction cars.

When he began turning them out in 1968, he was the only person in North America making a fiberglass car of this type. But in recent years three other companies have followed suit.

Why this particular model and not some other?

Timmis explains that most people interested in older cars naturally lean toward a convertible, and the most graceful styling for such cars was in the early 1930s when designers produced clean, uncluttered lines.

"In the 'teens and '20s car design was still trying to progress from the buggy era," he says.

He has built versions with all new parts, but this line will come with a mixture of recycled and new parts, many of them hand-made.

Some mechanical parts are made in Brazil, the rubber items in Argentina, small chrome parts in Hong Kong and the steering wheels in California.

Others are made by Timmis Motors or by Victoria-area firms.

THE engine of the 1934 Ford — a flathead V8, one of the most powerful made in those days — continued to be built substantially unchanged until 1954, and Timmis has been able to find the 10 he needed mostly from old cars acquired on Vancouver Island.

These are sent to the Ford rebuilding plant in Vancouver and the reconditioned engine comes with a 12,000-mile guarantee.

Timmis said the single most frustrating aspect of his venture has been the endless hassles and problems with customs regulations.

If his business grows to the point where he's producing about 100 cars a year, the frustrations with bureaucracy alone would be enough to drive him off the Island, he says.

"I would move like a shot to Washington state," he adds.

City Aid Asked In Getting Copter Service

Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. today asked the city of Victoria for assistance in establishing a Vancouver-Victoria service that would require construction of terminals worth up to $2 million.

In a brief to city council's intergovernmental relations committee, Okanagan marketing manager Kyle Steele said his company proposes to operate a helicopter airline service between the city's heliport pad on Esquimalt Road and an as-yet-undetermined location along Vancouver's waterfront near the foot of Burrard Street.

He said the service would use 28-passenger Sikorsky S61N helicopters certified and equipped for instrument flight regulations, meaning that they could fly under poor weather conditions.

Steele said the downtown-to-downtown flight times would be about 30 to 35 minutes and "we estimate that at least 95 per cent of scheduled flights could be completed in the face of inclement weather."

Steele also said the service would be competitive with existing services provided public ownership of terminal facilities is possible.

He said provision of terminals is estimated to cost $1 to $2 million.

He asked council to endorse the proposed operation and to join with the city of Vancouver in applying to the provincial government under the Airports Assistance Program for funding of the proposed terminals and facilities in both cities.

Steele said Okanagan estimated it would have to spend between $500,000 and $700,000 on the purchase and installation of instruments and related equipment.

The committee tabled the matter after Mayor Mike Young said it should be dealt with at a future date when council considers the whole issue of air commuter traffic in Victoria.

There is growing concern at City Hall about the increasing amount of float-plane traffic in the Inner Harbor.

Young said the helicopter proposal should also be taken under advisement for the time being because he felt the terminal cost figures quoted were very conservative.

He said the $2 million estimate didn't take into consideration the cost to the city for the land involved or for committing the property to that use.

Official Ponders Legal Action

Victoria personnel director Terry FitzPatrick said today he's not sure whether he'll take legal action against the city for his sudden dismissal Tuesday.

No reason for the firing has been given by Mayor Mike Young and council.

FitzPatrick had 31 years service with the city and was five years away from retirement.

He said he has discussed the matter with his lawyer but will wait until Oct. 12 when his dismissal becomes official before deciding his course of action.

Although he initially expected to work until the end of the week, FitzPatrick was told Wednesday he is expected to leave city hall as soon as possible.

OVERDOSE NOT ALWAYS FATAL

Man's Chance Slim - Doctor

Seventy-two-year-old Galliano Giovanni Piccoli who died last month in Royal Jubilee Hospital following a mixup in his medication would probably have died even if the correct dosage had been administered, a heart specialist told a coroner's jury Wednesday.

Dr. Michael Cody said Piccoli, who was admitted to the emergency room with a suspected heart attack the evening of Sept. 17, was in a desperate condition and that his chances of surviving were slight.

He noted an autopsy report showed Piccoli was suffering from emphysema, bronchitis, obesity, hardening of the arteries. He also had a greatly enlarged heart and a history of coronary problems.

Piccoli was attended to by Dr. Jacob Sturmwind, a general practitioner who happened to be in the emergency room on a call for another doctor.

Last week Sturmwind told the jury he had injected Xylocaine into Piccoli in hopes of restoring the stricken man's heart rhythm.

However, he testified, through a mixup in the syringes, he had inadvertently given Piccoli twice the recommended dosage of the drug.

Piccoli went into convulsions and despite attempts by physicians to resuscitate him, died a short time later.

Cody said that while the dosage was toxic, it was not necessarily a lethal dose. He said a search of medical literature shows a number of cases where patients have received even higher dosages than Piccoli, and survived.

Sturmwind said last week he had asked for a 100-milligram syringe of Xylocaine to be injected as a bolus, that is all at once, but nurse Jean Haley handed him a 1,000-milligram syringe.

Haley testified on Wednesday, however, she had never handed Sturmwind any syringes.

She said she had taken two 1,000-milligram syringes from a store of drugs in response to an urgent request from Sturmwind for "Xylocaine and a Xylocaine drip."

She said she understood Sturmwind as wanting a bolus of Xylocaine as well as a solution of the drug to be given through an intravenous bag.

But, she said, she had trouble putting one of the 1,000-milligram syringes together and went to ask her supervisor, Mrs. Susan Drysdale, how to use it.

After being told the syringe was to be used for dilution only, Mrs. Haley returned, stopping on the way to pick up a 100-milligram bolus of the drug.

When she got back she found Sturmwind had already taken the larger syringe and had injected about a third of it into Piccoli through the intravenous tubing.

"I said 'this is the Xyolcaine for direct injection . . . you've given the wrong medication.' "

She said Sturmwind replied "Oh, no."

"I turned and looked at Mr. Piccoli and saw the patient was getting into seizure," she said.

The inquest resumes Oct. 11 before coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Young Cyclist Badly Injured

A 12-year-old boy is in serious condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after riding his bicycle into the side of a car in Sidney Wednesday evening.

Sidney RCMP said Christopher Kipot of 10120 Meadlana received head injuries in the mishap which occurred at Mills and Munro.

Police said driver of the car was Cheryl Thomas, 36, of 2-35 Lewis in Victoria.

Ask the Times

Q. We live in Esquimalt and have watched quite a few parades of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps over the years. We wonder if the corps is named for the rainbow or a ship. Can you tell us? C.R.

A. The corps is named after the first ship to be commissioned into the Royal Canadian Navy. A former Royal Navy cruiser she became HMCS Rainbow on Aug. 4, 1910.

Q. Can you tell me if a Canadian yacht has ever challenged the United States for the America's Cup? B.W.

A. Yes, twice, both unsuccessfully. The Countess of Dufferin sailed against the Americans in 1876 and the Atalanta in 1881.

'It's Slow, Uphill Climb' To Change Indian Image

The class of elementary school children listens attentively as the spokesmen from the Victoria Native Indian Friendship Centre tell about their people — their arts and crafts, their culture and the issues they face.

It's all part of a native awareness program, says Butch Dick, the centre's executive director.

Last year 48 elementry schools were visited and Dick says he hopes the program will become an integral part of the school system.

He sees it as a long-term investment to help dispel the stereotyped image of the native Indian as a drunk or a welfare case.

Dick says the benefits may never be seen by his generation.

"It's a slow, uphill climb," he says, adding the image is the biggest stumbling block his people face.

The centre at 1298 Gladstone Avenue is a busy place. In one week as many as 350 use its facilities.

Dick says about 75 per cent of them are people from reservations who feel lost in their new urban setting. The remainder are from reservations in the area.

At the centre they develop skills and rediscover their pride in the past. They learn to cope with their new life, gaining mental stature as they do.

Dick describes the centre as a clearing house with one of its essential functions being communication with the society that surrounds it and the Indians themselves, who speak seven dialects.

The centre is one of 19 throughout B.C. and one of 23 agencies that look to the United Way for financial help.

This year's United Way campaign has a target of $926,500, a nine per cent increase over last year's $792,147, which was reached.

Royals Bounce Back

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Larry Gura, who wasn't good enough to stick with New York Yankees, proved too good for them in the hour of Kansas City's greatest need.

"The revenge factor's not there anymore," Gura said after hurling six strong innings in a 10-4 Royals victory Wednesday that squared the best-of-five American League playoff series at 1-1.

"I just wanted to settle us down and help us win because we knew we had to win this one," Gura said. "It was a must for us."

Gura, traded to the Royals two years ago for now-retired catcher Fran Healy, gave up eight hits and two runs and had this to say about Billy Martin, the former Yankees manager who decided he was expendable.

"If Billy Martin was still managing the Yankees, we'd be playing the Red Sox."

The Royals got started in the same sloppy, mistake-prone fashion that dogged them in the opener Tuesday night when the Yankees breezed to a 7-1 triumph. With one out, Fred Patek made a throwing error on Thurman Munson's ground ball and Reggie Jackson, reaching base for the 12th consecutive time in post-season action, walked.

But Gura got Graig Nettles to ground out to end the threat and George Brett quickly smacked what was to be the first of 16 Royals hits leading off the bottom of the first.

One out later, Amos Otis singled Brett to third, followed by a long sacrifice fly off the bat of Darrell Porter that put the Royals on top, 1-0.

The Yankees immediately mounted a threat in the second on the first of Chris Chambliss's four singles, Roy White's fielder's choice and a single by Fred Stanley. Then Patek made a back-handed stop of Bucky Dent's grounder behind second and started a deceptively easy double play.

"That was a big play for us," Patek said. "It stopped their momentum and could have prevented a big inning."

The Royals chased starter Ed Figueroa with a four-run burst in the second that got started on consecutive singles by Clint Hurdle and Al Cowens and kept rolling when shortstop Bucky Dent's throw to Nettles at third hit Patek and he trotted home as the ball rolled into foul territory.

Runners wound up at second and third and Frank White then hit a chopper through the middle for two more runs.

Reliever Dick Tidrow got a quick out and then gave up two more singles as the Royals took a 5-0 lead.

That was the end of the scoring until a tense and bizarre seventh that saw a near-fight, an embarrassing lapse of memory by umpires and players alike and a homer that Patek called the most satisfying hit of his life.

Chambliss and White singled leading off, moved up a base on Cliff Johnson's grounder and pulled the Yankees to within three on Dent's two-run single. A single by Mickey Rivers brought Marty Pattin from the Royals bullpen, who coaxed a popup from Munson and a fly ball from Lou Piniella.

A one-out double by Pete LaCock and Hurdle's triple off the right faeld fence gave the Royals a 6-2 lead and rookie Willie Wilson, the fastest man in the major leagues, ran for Hurdle. Al Cowens grounded a single to Nettles at third and Wilson broke toward the plate where he collided with Munson on the tag.

Both men went sprawling, but Munson was up like a cat and charging toward Wilson. Players from both benches stood tentatively on the periphery of the action while umpires pacified the angry Yankees' catcher, who later took several stitches for a cut on his chin.

When order was restored, Patek leaned into a high fastball and popped it into the left-field bleachers for a two-run homer.

"It was the most gratifying hit I ever had," said the diminutive shortstop. "There was no doubt in my mind it was fair. I watched it and loved every minute of it."

Sparky Lyle then came in and retired White on a ground ball.

Each team picked up two runs in the eighth, with Chambliss and Dent getting RBI singles for the Yankees and Otis and LaCock knocking in runs for the Royals. Reliever Al Hrabosky set New York down in order in the ninth, only the second time all day the Yankees failed to get a runner on base.

The series resumes Friday in Yankee Stadium, with Catfish Hunter going for the Yankees and the Royals countering with Paul Splittorff.

Garvey Flashes Power As Dodgers Maul Phils

CRASH was felt throughout Royals Stadium in Kansas City, Wednesday, as Willie Wilson of Kansas City Royals collided with catcher Thurman Munson of New York Yankees in second game of American League playoff. Wilson was out and the Royals won 10-4 to even the series at one game each. See story (AP wirephoto).

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Steve Garvey, who thrives on all-star and post-season play, has powered Los Angeles into a 1-0 lead in the National League playoff series over Philadelphia Phillies, and he believes his long ball hitting has given the Dodgers momentum.

Garvey struck out leading off the second against Phillies starter Larry Christenson Wednesday night, but came back with two home runs, a triple, three runs scored and four RBI as the Dodgers shelled the Phillies 9-5.

"I think the home run that gave us the big lead was the key," said Garvey, whose first shot in the third inning came with the score tied 1-1 and teammates Bill Russell and Reggie Smith on base.

"It broke the ice between the teams feeling each other out and gave us the momentum," said Garvey.

"I've always enjoyed the pressure situations," said the Dodger first baseman. "The playoffs and World Series and all-star game have always been very important to me because they are showcases for baseball and it's very easy to get up for them. I always want to rise to the challenge of those situations."

Los Angeles pitcher Bob Welch, a rookie, who relieved starter Burt Hooton in the fifth after the Phillies drew to within 7-4, rose to the challenge too, picking up the victory by pitching 4 1-3 innings, allowing only two hits and one run while striking out five.

"He's an amazing young man. He's got super stuff," Dodger manager Tom Lasorda said. "Welch has pitched well all year. It's made a big difference for him up from the minors."

Welch posted a 7-4 record with a 2.03 earned run average in 23 regular season games for Los Angeles this year.

Dodger second baseman Davey Lopes, who also seems to shine in the playoffs, particularly against the Phillies, also had three hits, including a home run off Christenson.

Lopes said he and the Dodgers were up for the series against the Phillies because they have dedicated their play to coach and former Dodger infielder Junior Gilliam, hospitalized in a coma after suffering a stroke.

"We are extremely high and are going to be difficult to beat," said Lopes, who had two RBI and scored twice. "It's my job to motivate the team and I felt the entire team was very high emotionally tonight."

In the Phillies locker room, manager Danny Ozark said his club was no less ready, even though they lost their fifth straight playoff game at home. They lost two to Cincinnati in 1976 and came home 1-1 last seasonbefore dropping two to the Dodgers.

"We were just as high as they were," said Ozark. "We're certainly not going to get down because of one loss. It's still a five-game series. We'll come back like we did during the regular season.

"We were swinging the bat good, getting the base hits," said Greg Luzinski, noting that the Phillies nicked Dodger pitching for 12 hits. "The difference was those home runs.

"The're all must games from here on out," said Luzinski, who tripled off the right field wall leading off the Phils' second and scored their first run.

Philadelphia shortstop Larry Bowa, who led the Phillies with three hits, said, "Our backs aren't to the wall yet. If we lose tomorrow, then our backs are to the wall."

Bucks, Blades Take Openers

Western Homes Buckaroos and Duncan Blades opened the South Island Big Six Hockey League with victories Wednesday.

Buckaroos tripped Esquimalt Maple Leafs 7-3 at Esquimalt Sports Centre while the newly-formed Blades handed Juan de Fuca Merchants a 5-4 loss at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Gord Sturtridge set the pace for Bucks with two goals while singles were chipped in by Jerome Lister, Steve Leatham, Pat Finner, Stan Alstad and Lee Villiger.

Dale Cook, Rob Coldwell and Randy Krantz replied for Esquimalt.

Lambrick Setting Pace In Volleyball

Lambrick Park teams extended their winning ways in the Victoria and District High School Volleyball League with a pair of hard-fought victories over Esquimalt Wednesday.

The girls team, sparked by Jill Fougner's strong performance, defeated Esquimalt 15-6, 10-15, 15-11 while the boys, paced by Jeff Thom and Hugh Owens, recorded a 15-12, 13-15, 15-12 decision.

Both Lambrick teams now have won three straight.

United Wins McGavin Cup

Nanaimo United opened a new era Wednesday, tripping defending-champion Victoria West 2-0 to capture the Vancouver Island Soccer League's McGavin Cup before 350 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

United, promoted to the first division this season, is the first up-Island team to win the title.

Proceeds from the annual competition go to the injured players fund.

After a scoreless and evenly-played first half, Nanaimo went ahead one minute after the intermission when Ron Sage lobbed the ball over Victoria goalkeeper Jim DeGoede's head.

Wests missed their best chance around 10 minutes later when Ron Williams headed the ball just over the cross-bar after being set up by a cross from Bobby Duncan.

Brian Barraclough connected for the insurance goal 15 minutes later, booting the ball past DeGoede after getting a pass from playing-coach Ray Telford.

Nanaimo goalie Mike Hughes earned the shutout and received some excellent protection from the back four of Mark Hurwurth, Randy Senini, Robert Marshall and Bill Windecker.

Nanaimo ousted both Victoria Athletics and Oak Bay en route to the final.

The suspension and fines follow a Saskatoon game between the clubs Friday, which included a bench-clearing brawl.

Zeigler received the suspension for being the first player to leave the bench. Pats were fined $675 for being the first team to leave the bench, for receiving four game misconducts and having 13 players leave the bench.

Blades' fine was for having three game misconducts and also having 13 players leave the bench.

Brawl Mars Oiler Win Over Canucks

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks and Edmonton Oilers were 68 seconds into their exhibition hockey game in Edmonton Wednesday when a brawl interrupted the proceedings.

When the game ended three hours later, referee Wally Harris had assessed 162 minutes in penalties—including 20 majors—as the Oilers prevailed 5-3.

Edmonton, of the World Association, needed an empty-net goal by Stan Weir with eight seconds remaining to clinch the win over the National League's Canucks before 6,260 fans.

Harris assessed 11 of the 20 majors to Vancouver, along with two game misconducts to the Oilers and a match misconduct to Randy Holt of Vancouver.

Holt received the match misconduct for deliberate intent to injure in a skirmish with Edmonton's Steve Carlson. It was the third fight of the night for Holt, who also had a set-to with linesman Ron Asseltine.

Edmonton defenceman Al Hamilton scored what proved to be the winning goal while Vancouver was two men short after taking three minor penalties in succession. Doug Berry, Brett Callighen and Ron Chipperfield scored Edmonton's other goals while Roland Ericksson, Bob Manno and Chris Oddliefson replied for the Canucks, who were outshot 38-22.

Traditionally, penalty shots are a rare occurrence in pro hockey, but you'd never know it the way NHL referees have been clamping down the last couple of nights.

After Toronto goaltender Mike Palmateer thwarted New York Islanders' Mike Bossy on a penalty shot Tuesday, two more were awarded Wednesday with the Leafs once again involved.

This time Paul Harrison was in the Toronto goal and he turned back Andre Savard's solo try after the Buffalo centre had been hauled down from behind with less than five minutes left. The stop prevented the Sabres from snapping a 2-2 tie, but it wasn't enough as Buffalo pulled out a 4-2 exhibition season victory with two late goals.

Elsewhere, Boston Bruins battled New York Rangers to a 4-4 deadlock, with Bruins netminder Gilles Gilbert foiling Phil Esposito on a penalty shot midway through the second period.

In other games, Montreal Canadiens edged Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 in a battle of NHL clubs, while New England Whalers blanked Detroit Red Wings 3-0 and Indianapolis Racers and Cincinnati Stingers played to a 5-5 tie in a WHA contest.

Prejudice or Fair Play? The Tigers Want Back

max low

Prejudice . . . prejudice . . . prejudice.

The word rang around sedate Beacon Hill Park as though it was attached to a model airplane flying in circles.

Sure, Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association president Craig Wilson conceded, there has been prejudice by referees against the Tigers (made up of East Indian players) club.

But it is not racial prejudice, he said glancing across at some of the East Indians just leaving after watching an exhibition match against a Cuban side.

"There is prejudice, though, against their style of play — or rather the way they played," Wilson explained. "We had lots of incidents of players being hurt and of deliberate use of the hockey stick to injure. I was off work a week after an injury in a Tigers' game."

You have to go back five years to the start of Tiger trouble.

At that time Tigers, who had been in the league 10 years, and the big Rebels Club (for which Craig Wilson is now the playing coach) were arch rivals with either one or the other taking the men's field hockey crown each season.

But, after several incidents with referees, Tigers all marched from the field one day when their captain Amarjit Hundal was ordered off by the ref.

That one wasn't even against the Rebels. Castaways were their opponents and, as they were leading 1-0 when the Tigers walked off, they were awarded the game. Tigers asked for a replay. The association refused.

Stalemate. And the Tigers dropped out of the league.

They came back in again a couple of years later but, Wilson said, there were so many more incidents involving the East Indians that the season before last the Rebels club passed a mmtion that it would never again play the Tigers.

Rebels boycotted each scheduled meeting and the Tigers that season ran away with everything.

Last season, as the Rebels wouldn't play them, the Tigers dropped out once more. The club disbanded and a few of the players turned out for other clubs.

Now, the Tigers want back in. But the association isn't too sure.

"We decided to let them play exhibition games against the club with the bye each week so we can see how they behave," Wilson said, putting it quite plainly. "There's a committee made up of members of each club watching them and it will report to a general meeting after the first half of the season ends early in November. Then maybe they'll be able to play in the league for the second half."

Then, maybe they won't, either.

"The only reason they don't want us in the league is because we're too good," Bachittar Basi of the Tigers told me. "We've formed up again and have a really strong side. Even the Rebels aren't any match for us now."

To make it possible for the exhibition games to take place, the Rebels club had to wipe that motion from its books. The two sides met for the first time in a long while Sunday and the Tigers beat the Rebels, 6-1, in what was described as "a very clean game."

One Tiger, Naroop Kahlon, played for the Island Selects (though they were mainly Rebels coached and led on the field by Wilson) against the Cubans.

But it wasn't much of a game, anyway, with the visitors winning, 2-0, including one goal on a penalty flick.

Most entertaining thing about it, in fact, was the amusingly vocal Cubans.

All under the age of 21, they were on their way to the Pan-American Junior field hockey championships starting next Monday in Mexico. If they don't win the gold medal, perhaps they'll be given some special debating award.

Never have I heard a team in any sport carry on quite like that!

On the field, the players didn't just call out to each other. They screamed. The ones on the bench screamed louder at the ones on the field.

BACHITTAR BASI

CRAIG WILSON
. . . "we are watching"

And above them all, Cuban officials Alberto Redondo and Jesus Molina screamed the loudest.

There were, of course, many shouts of "Rapido! Rapido!" But there were also many others less easy to make out. And so I asked Alberto just what it was that Jesus, surely the owner of field hockey's most powerful set of lungs, was yelling about.

Alberto smiled wryly.

"Oh, you know. He says 'Pepe to the left; Chicho more to the right.' Just tactics."

All I can say then is they sure must be hard of hearing, these Cubans.

After landing in Vancouver, the visitors were beaten, 4-1, by UBC. They blamed it on jet-lag.

I think now, though, it was tongue-lag!

Wakelyn Ahead

Marty Wakelyn is one up on Steve Hanna because George Chadwick played the spoiler's role Wedneday.

Chadwick scored with only 22 seconds left in the game to deprive Hanna of the shutout as Saanich Braves scored a 7-1 South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League victory over Fuller Lake Flyers.

Wakelyn posted a shutout in his first start as Saanich beat Juan de Fuca 3-0 Tuesday when the Braves gave early-season indication of goaltending and defensive strength.

Bill Adkin and Ron Jobson both scored twice for Braves, now in a first-place tie with Esquimalt Legion with a 2-0 record. Wayne Himmelman, Tracy Patteron and Scott Connors scored the other goals for Braves, who outshot Flyers 53-23.

Mt. Doug, Victoria Post Wins

Mt. Douglas and Victoria High kept their unbeaten records intact and moved to within two points of first-place Spectrum in Greater Victoria High School Boys' Soccer League play Wednesday.

Mt. Doug blanked Belmont 10-0 and Victoria Tyees edged Reynolds 1-0 in a hard-fought contest.

In other matches, Oak Bay tripped Esquimalt 6-1 and Parkland topped Claremont, 5-1.

Meanwhile, Mt. Douglas and Victoria are waiting for a decision from league officials over a mixup. Tyees apparently thought a game last month against Mt. Doug had been postponed. Mt. Doug, which showed up for the match, believed there was a default when the home team failed to show.

Scoring:

MT. DOUGLAS (10) — Russ Rimmer 4, David McCue 2, Peter Brix 2, Rob Wallace, Rich Stebeck; BELMONT (0).

VICTORIA (1) — Mark Wyatt; REYNOLDS (0).

OAK BAY (6) — Paul Studders 2, Dave Studders 2, Marc Keith, Peter Skillings; ESQUIMALT (1) — Doug Walters.

PARKLAND (5) — Russ Norbury 3, Ben Reeves, Gord Fox; CLAREMONT (1) — Mike McGregor.

Wales Conference Study in Contrasts

(First of two)
By SCOTT ABBOTT
The Canadian Press

The two divisions of the Prince of Wales Conference promise a study in contrasts for the 1978-79 National Hockey League season, which starts next Wednesday.

While Montreal Canadiens appear well-equipped to again capture Norris Division honors, the Adams Division could be a four-way fight beteen Boston Bruins, Buffalo Sabres, Toronto Maple Leafs and Minnesota North Stars.

The revamped North Stars, incorporating players from the defunct Cleveland Barons and moving into the Adams section from the Smythe Division to replace Cleveland, may point the way to professional hockey's future.

With the NHL having ballooned to 18 teams and the World Hockey Association further diluting the quality of the product, some voices were raised in the hope that a retrenchment of franchises might produce fewer but better clubs.

Now that the Barons have disappeared, the league will operate with 17 teams, and the North Stars will serve as the first indication as to the success of consolidation.

Holdover general manager Lou Nanne and coach Harry Howell, who was the Cleveland general-manager last season, should be able to find 19 performers among the 53 who went to camp who can improve on Minnesota's 18-53-9 record last season.

It earned the North Stars first choice in the amateur draft in June, and they used it to select centre Bobby Smith from Ottawa '67s of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League.

While Minnesota might have dipped into the pool in other circumstances, the new North Stars might lose the maximum three players in the waiver draft Monday.

Discounting roster changes via the waiver draft and late trades, the Prince of Wales Conference clubs could finish this way:

NORRIS DIVISION

Montreal Canadiens: Sam Pollock's departure as general manager may have something to do with the fact that the Stanley Cup champions face their toughest travel schedule in years, but there should be ample talent to repeat as top-finishing team in the league.

Goalkeepers Ken Dryden and Michel Larocque, who combined to win the Vezina Trophy last season, are back behind a defence corps that boasts Larry Robinson, Serge Savard and Guy Lapointe. Guy Lafleur, who suffered a broken nose in an exhibition game, will return in time to seek his fourth consecutive scoring championship, and speedy Mark Napier and rugged Cam Connor have come from the WHA to add even more front-line depth. Canadiens are in good position to make several deals before the waiver draft if they so desire.

Detroit Red Wings: Free-agent goalie Rogie Vachon will help, but Detroit can't expect the 37-point improvement in the standings they recorded last year. Defenceman Greg Joly will miss four months with an injured wrist, and blueline colleague Terry Harper is 38. Rookie rearguard Willie Huber and Swedish-leftwinger Dan Labraaten, who moved over from Winnipeg Jets of the WHA, should help.

Pittsburgh Penguins: Newcomers are defenceman Tom Bladon and forwards Orest Kindrachuk and Ross Lonsberry from Philadelphia Flyers and defenceman Randy Carlyle and centre George Ferguson from Toronto, but defenceman Dave Burrows, sent to Toronto, will be missed. Gregg Sheppard from Boston has balked at reporting, and the netminding duo of Denis Herron and Gord Laxton is weak.

Washington Capitals: Jim Bedard played well in goal last season and will be joined by either Bernie Wolfe or Richard Sirois, while holdover defenders include Rick Green, Yvon Labre, Gord Lane, Robert Picard, Gord Smith and Bryan Watson. The debut of centre Ryan Walter, second choice over-all in the June draft, will be delayed by a knee injury.

Los Angeles Kings: Rookie coach Bob Berry needs a backup for Gary Simmons, the only tested netminder on the roster. Centre Dale McCourt will not arrive as compensation for the loss of Vachon, but the Kings did get defenceman Rick Hampton and forwards Dave Gardner and Steve Jensen from Minnesota for free-agent rearguard Gary Sargent. Defender Brian Glennie and forwards Scott Garland and Kurt Walker come from Toronto for defenceman Dave Hutchison and leftwinger Lorne Stamler.

ADAMS DIVISION

Boston Bruins: Johnny Bucyk has retired and centre Jean Ratelle was 38 on Tuesday, but if goalkeeper Gerry Cheevers returns in good form after knee surgery the Bruins will be tough again. Gilles Gilbert and Ron Grahame are battling for the second netminding spot, and Dick Redmond joins a defence crew that has Brad Park, Gary Doak, Mike Milbury and Rick Smith. The Bruins will be rugged and they figure to score enough goals to make their disciplined style again pay off. They start as the club to beat in their division.

Toronto Maple Leafs: Paul Harrison from Minnesota joins Mike Palmateer in goal, and Burrows, Hutchison and rookie Joel Quenneville, only the second OMJHL defenceman to score more than 100 points in a season, have been acquired to join Borje Salming and Ian Turnbull on defence. But the Leafs gave up a lot of goals in losing six of their first pre-schedule games, and there is a feeling that they need a calibre centre to go with Darryl Sittler if their goal production is to be good enough.

Buffalo Sabres: Goalie Don Edwards is a key to the chances of the Sabres, believed to have tried unsuccessfully to trade forwards Jim Lorentz, Rene Robert and Fred Stanfield to Colorado Rockies for rightwinger Wilf Palement during the off-season. However, rookie-winger Tony McKegney has sparkled in pre-schedule play and could prove to be an important addition to a talented team which so far has not been able to put it together when Stanley Cup play starts.

Minnesota North Stars: Gilles Meloche and injured Pete LoPresti, who may miss three weeks, give Minnesota fine goaltending, and Sargent, Brad Maxwell, Bryan Maxwell, Jim McKenny, Jean Potvin and Greg Smith should give the club capable defence play. And there appears to be considerable forward-line depth with Bobby Smith, Per-Olov Brasar, Dennis Maruk, Glen Sharpley, Tim Young, J. P. Parise, Al MacAdam, Mike Fidler, Bill Hogaboam, Kris Manery and Tom Younghans.

12-Game Suspension For Hockey Fight

LANGLEY (CP) — John Strait, 16, of the Langley Canadians of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League has been suspended for 12 games, Bob Mullock, president of the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association, said Wednesday.

Strait received a match penalty following a fight with Jim Allinson of Delta Suns in an exhibition game Sept. 16.

Linesman Joe Morneau suffered a broken nose while trying to keep Strait from getting at the Delta player.

"Anybody who thinks they don't have to break up a fight when the officials say they do is looking at a minimum of a 12-game suspension," said Mullock. "That seems like the only way they are going to learn."

Watford Pulls Soccer Shock

LONDON (Reuter) — Division III Watford brought off one of the soccer upsets of the year Wednesday when they knocked England's best-known club, Manchester United, out of the English League Cup winning 2-1 on Uniteds' own ground.

Striker Luther Blissett silenced a 40,000 Old Trafford crowd with two second-half headers to give Watford, whose chairman is pop singer Elton John, a place in the fourth round. Joe Jordan had put United ahead.

Another Division I club, Bolton Wanderers, also went down to a surprise defeat, losing 2-1 at Exeter City. Bolton striker Neil Whatmore was sent off.

Uniteds' neighbors, Manchester City, could only draw 1-1 with Blackpool, like Exeter a Division III club. Aston Villa were held 1-1 by Division II promotion challengers Crystal Palace. Norwich City were lucky to scrape a 2-0 win against little Chester.

Fortunately for the first division's reputation, champions Nottingham Forest were in majestic form and crushed Oxford United 5-0.

Firemen Layoffs 'Just the Beginning'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The planned layoff of firemen in Oak Bay is just the beginning of a general campaign in B.C. to cut back on jobs in the public sector, the Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night.

Terry Erskine, president of the B.C. Professional Firefighters Association, relayed that message to the council delegates while seeking support for the firemen's fight against the cutbacks.

"What is starting here is going to hit the whole trade union movement and especially the public sector," said Erskine, who is also president of the Saanich Firefighters Association.

Oak Bay council has announced plans to lay off three of the municipality's 30 firemen at the end of the year and leave one position vacant.

Erskine said in an effort to slash expenses, Oak Bay has resorted to measuring the value of firemen by their productivity.

"If they don't have fires they don't want you around," he said.

What council doesn't seem to take into consideration is the number of hours the firemen spend on fire prevention which cut down on the number of damaging fires, Erskine added.

The firemen have launched a door-to-door campaign in Oak Bay asking residents if they support the planned cutbacks. So far the survey shows overwhelming support for the firemen's position.

Erskine said the firemen hope to get 8,000 signatures and then seek some form of third-party intervention in the dispute.

Council delegates voted unanimously to support the firefighters and call upon Oak Bay council to release the G.H. Newhouse and Associates report on the firemen.

Council secretary Larry Ryan said today it is a matter of principle that the consulting firm's report be released because it has to do with a matter of public importance.

He said the firemen should be given the opportunity to study the report and then decide whether council is justified in laying off the firemen.

He said issuing a press release on the report in some kind of public relations move by council is not conducive to good labor-management relations.

"Council should have taken the firefighters into their confidence rather than conduct a PR job."

Water Rate Plea

A plea for a reduction in water rates for bonafide farmers will be made by Ald. Geoff Vantreight at next Tuesday's meeting of Saanich council's finance committeee.

Vantreight, president of the Vancouver Island Vegetable Co-operative and a major land owner on the Saanich Peninsula, said Wednesday he will suggest a reduction from 60 to 18 cents per thousand gallons.

Reducing the rates would particularly assist potato growers, he said.

"Spuds, a heavy water crop, can cost you up to $200 an acre if you water five times during the growing season."

He noted Central Saanich charges a gravel company 18 cents per thousand gallons for its operation.

"If they can do it for washing gravel, then we can do it to keep farmers in businesss."

Vantreight said he has more than $100,000 invested in wells on 200 acres he owns in Central Saanich.

"Without them I couldn't afford to stay in business," he said.

Curtis Labelled Hypocrite

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is being hypocritical in asking regional boards to hold the line on staffing and spending, Capital Regional Board chairman Jim Campbell said Wednesday.

He said Curtis ordered the board not to expand and then handed it responsibility for urban transit, a move that will require a staff increase.

The CRD will have to negotiate operating contracts with the newly-formed Crown corporation, the Urban Transit Authority. It also must establish levels of service and fares.

This means additional employees to specialize in the area of urban transportation, Campbell said.

In a letter to the CRD, Curtis asked for a freeze on expansion projects until the province completes its review of regional districts.

Any broadening of regional district activity at this time could jeopardize the findings of the review committee, Curtis said.

NEW HOSPITAL TENDERS JAN. 1

Construction of the new Victoria General Hospital will begin in March, Capital Regional District Sooke director Charles Perkins said Wednesday.

The project will go to tender Jan. 1 and ground-breaking at the Helmcken Road site will take place two months later, Perkins said after a regional board meeting.

The hospital will be constructed in two phases, said Perkins, chairman of the project building committee.

First phase will be the construction of a diagnostic treatment building which will go to tender June 1 with actual construction starting in July.

The second phase is a nursing tower which will start in December of 1979.

Perkins said the hospital should be completed by February, 1982, at a cost of between $44 and $47 million.

TRUCK CRASHES

BOSTON BAR (CP) — A truck carrying 5,000 kilograms of dynamite crashed into a ditch near this Fraser Canyon community Wednesday, but no one was injured and the cargo was only slightly damaged.

One lane of the Trans Canada Highway was closed for five hours while the dynamite was loaded onto another truck.

The accident occurred when the five-ton truck, owned by Explosives Ltd. of Calgary, the dynamite's destination, apparently struck a rock and careened into a ditch near Hell's Gate.

Group Ruling On Minnie Mt.

The independent legal advice to Saanich council on certain conflict-of-interest questions in the Minnie Mountain controversy will be provided by a group-think process rather than a single source, Mayor Mel Couvelier said Wednesday.

Council agreed earlier this week to ask the Law Society of B.C. to recommend a law firm which would advise the municipality whether any such conflict might have invalidated council's recent approval of the Broadmead Farms Ltd. development proposal.

But Couvelier said the society indicated Wednesday that instead of recommending a firm for the task it would undertake to provide the ruling from its benchers, by the Nov. 6 deadline set by Saanich.

The charges involve the position of Ald. David Paterson and the municipality's solicitors Pearlman & Lindholm, in an alleged business relationship with the developers.

GATE Appeal Opens

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyer Harry Hopyto of Toronto shot rapid-fire arguments at the nine judges of the Supreme Court of Canada as a major legal fight over homosexual rights opened today.

Kopyto said the Vancouver Sun had no reasonable cause for refusing to carry an advertisement submitted by the Gay Alliance Toward Equality in October, 1974. The ad was to promote the homosexual newspaper Gay Tide.

GATE complained under the British Columbia human rights code and The Sun was ordered to carry the ad. However, the B.C. Court of Appeal ruled the newspaper did not have to accept the material.

A human rights commission board of inquiry found evidence that The Sun decision was not reasonable, said Kopyto. It had found The Sun had no real policy against homosexual material because it had carried movie ads for films about lesbianism and group sex.

The appeal by GATE appears to have struck the interest of all nine judges on the court. All the judges, except Mr. Justice Louis-Philippe Pigeon, asked questions of Kopyto or made comments. Pigeon was silent but took copious notes.

Twice during the first hour of the appeal Chief Justice Bora Laskin asked Kopyto to slow down his arguments.

"Mr. Kopyto, you are running along at 150 miles an hour," said the chief justice.

Quebecers Patriotic

TORONTO (CP) — A federal report says Quebec residents are more likely to buy Canadian products than other consumers in the country.

Meanwhile, an Ontario study, conducted by Scott and Withrow Inc. of Toronto, said 67 per cent of Ontario consumers see some benefit in buying Canadian goods.

However, the research showed that residents in Northern Ontario, consumers employed in clerical or sales positions and people under the age of 26 are not as concerned about the benefits of buying Canadian goods.

A federal spokesman said the report's findings involving Quebec consumers were not surprising.

"Despite all the foofaraw in Quebec, I don't think people are interested in separating," he said.

The report also said Quebecers buy domestic goods because of a desire to buy better quality products and to create more jobs and help the economy.

Heart Disease Decline Seen

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Toronto physician said Wednesday coronary heart disease, the No. 1 killer in North America, has peaked and now may be on the decline.

Dr. Aubie Angel, an associate professor of medicine at the University of Toronto, said a modified style of living may be the reason for the change.

Speaking to the annual meeting of the Manitoba Heart Foundation, Dr. Angel said heart disease still is a bigger killer than cancer, strokes and accidents.

He said heart disease in 1974 claimed nearly 83,000 lives in Canada. But after years of steady increases, the incidence appears to have reached a plateau.

Dr. Angel said in an interview it is difficult to pinpoint the reason for the disease's tapering off, but said several factors may be responsible.

"It could be that the amount of cholesterol being consumed is less, or the change in nutrition habits.

"It could be that the whole community is leaner or that the community is more athletic, since there has been an exponential increase in fitness."

Dr. Angel said smoking and high blood pressure are the main factors continuing to contribute to heart disease.

Human Gene Observed

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Actual observation of a human gene has been reported by two University of Michigan medical researchers, who say they have succeeded in isolating, viewing and photographing several lone genes.

The work by pediatricians Dr. Roy Schmickel and Dr. Golder Wilson was announced Wednesday at the annual meeting of the American Society of Human Genetics in Vancouver.

Both researchers are professors at the university's medical centre where they are exploring causes of the birth defect mongolism.

The gene is the basic unit of heredity, composed of DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid.

Schmickel and Wilson used an electron microscope to look at the isolated human genes. David Jacson, a University of Michigan professor of microbiology, then photographed the units.

The team's report is among the first to show how medical scientists are using DNA methodology, a university spokesman said.

Human Rights Cloud Cancer Congress

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — The 12th International Cancer Congress opening today appears destined to answer one major question — is the scientific community really divided on human rights issues?

The setting chosen for the largest and most important cancer congress of the last four years will not let the question go unanswered.

Argentina, where thousands of people have disappeared over the last three years in a ruthless conflict between leftist guerrillas and security forces, is a favorite target of many human rights crusaders.

Among the thousands of people who disappeared and others who have been held for months without public trials are 185 doctors, nurses and medical students, according to reports from human rights groups.

The two sides have already squared-off for the Oct. 5-11 congress that more than 6,000 doctors, nurses and scientists are scheduled to attend.

"Although research takes up most of my day-to-day life, human liberty is more important to me than cancer," Henry Kaplan, professor of radiology at Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif., said recently.

Kaplan, instead of attending the congress opening, will be at a counter-congress in Paris. He was among the doctors and scientists who sent a letter to the president of the International Union Against Cancer — organizers of the conference here — encouraging discussion of the human rights issue at the Argentine congress.

On the other side of the fence is the Argentine co-ordinating committee that announced last week that people who tie their attendance at the conference to human rights concerns are not welcome in Argentina.

"We cannot mix politics with science," one committee spokesman said.

The organizing committee, however, does intend to make sure that those doctors and scientists who come get a guided tour of Buenos Aires, are exposed to "our rich cultural and artistic patrimony," and are met with "the traditional hospitality of our citizens,"

The primary mission of the doctors, nurses and scientists from 73 nations who travel to Buenos Aires will be to exchange information regarding the latest advances in the fight against cancer.

But due to a threatened boycott by doctors and scientists concerned about the situation of human liberties in Argentina, the success of the congress's primary mission has been put into question.

Approximately one year ago, 600 U.S. cancer doctors and researchers signed a petition protesting against the denial of due process of law to people punished, in one way or another, for subversive activities.

"If they have a fair trial and deserve to be in prison, we have no objections," Kaplan said.

In the petition the doctors and scientists said they would refuse to attend the congress and urged the international organizers to search for a new congress site.

"They aren't just any old 600 people," Kaplan said. "For the most part they are the most outstanding and prestigious of the profession, including many Nobel laureates."

Kaplan, who along with colleagues from Holland, France and England was in Buenos Aires last week, was met by a wall of silence when he asked about the 185 disappeared or arrested Argentines doctors, nurses and medical students.

Argentine officials flatly refused to see the group, Kaplan said.

"Informally we were representing thousands of physicians and bio-medical scientists in our countries," he said.

Kaplan and members of his group insisted that they are not picking on Argentina but rather feel that social issues, especially those involving human liberties, should be a regular feature on the agenda of scientific conferences.

"Science and technology do not flourish in an atmosphere of fear," Kaplan said.

During the past four months, Argentina has been the host of two other international events — the 1978 world soccer cup and the U.N. conference on technical cooperation among developing countries.

'THEY ADOPT A SICK ROLE'

BOSTON (AP) — When a worker learns that he has high blood pressure, he calls in sick far more often than he did before he knew about the illness, a Canadian study finds.

"The price of efforts to achieve blood pressure control may be higher than any of us have anticipated," the researchers conclude.

The doctors at McMaster University in Hamilton found that steelworkers called in sick three times as much after learning that they had high blood pressure.

The researchers believe that when people learn about their condition, they "adopt the sick role and treat themselves as more fragile."

More Health Hazards, CUPE Report Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — Shift work interferes with bowel movements and desk jobs cause varicose veins, says the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) in a 197-page inventory of health and safety hazards faced by public employees.

Hospital workers are exposed to disease, laboratory employees are exposed to toxic substances, road workers are endangered by tar and garbage collectors in remote areas might come across rats and bears.

"We have found that CUPE members are exposed to almost virtually every workplace health and safety hazard found in private industry."

The union, which represents 230,000 municipal and provincial employees, said there is a need for improved health and safety standards.

But instead, hazards are being increased because of budget and staff cuts.

"There are numerous cases of understaffing which leave too few people to do a job, or which force workers to work alone. There are speed-up incentive plans which represent an extreme cost to the health and safety of employees."

U.S. Inflation Jump Termed 'Ominous'

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The inflation that was centred in food and housing costs earlier this year has spread thrugh the rest of the economy, and this year's U.S. inflation rate will be well over 7 per cent, the administration said Wednesday.

In a gloomy assessment delivered as the administration readies a new anti-inflation plan, the Council on Wage and Price Stability noted consumer prices rose at an "ominous" 9.5 per cent annual rate in the first eight months of the year.

Last January President Carter predicted the rate of inflation would be 6 per cent this year. Food prices were rising faster than that, but administration economists felt they would slacken off.

That did not happen until July, however, and by then the inflation had spread to other sectors of the economy. Wage increases have picked up in recent months, and prices for raw materials also have been accelerating, the report observed.

The wage-price council said when food and energy prices are taken out of the consumer price index, there is a "substantial acceleration" in the so-called underlying rate of inflation.

The underlying rate "has moved up from an average annual rate of 6 per cent in 1976-77 to an annual rate of more than 7 per cent this year," the council said.

Because price increases are becoming larger all along the production chain — from raw materials to semi-procesed goods — the outlook for the rest of the year is bleak.

While wage increases also have accelerated, the average Ameican worker is not better off, the agency noted. "The large increases in money wages have not resulted in subsantial real income gains; they have been eroded by the even greater escalation of consumer price inflation," it said.

Administration economists contend that most of the inflation over the past several years has been caused by a tail-biting chase between wages and prices that has its roots in the big jump in oil and other commodity prices in 1973 and 1974.

Those price increases pulled billions of dollars of purchasing power from American consumers and businesses and transferred it to oil-producing countries and others.

Ever since, administration analysts say, workers have been seeking pay increases and businesses seeking price increases to try to recapture buying power that is gone forever.

Woman Ablaze Near Windsor Castle

WINDSOR, England (Reuter) — A woman burned herself to death Wednesday by the bank of the River Thames near Windsor Castle, police said.

The woman was spotted ablaze on a path along the Thames about noon by people on a passing boat.

The scene was less than a kilometre from Windsor Castle, the summer residence of Queen Elizabeth, who was in Scotland.

Two empty bottles of inflammable fluid were found in the woman's handbag, along with a passport for a woman aged 54. Police said she appeared to be much younger. They declined to give the nationality of the passport.

Australian Lynette Phillips, 24, apparently a member of an Indian-led religious sect, burned herself to death Monday outside the United Nations' European headquarters in Geneva.

Four Enter Guilty Pleas In $1.7M Bilk of GSA

BALTIMORE (WP) — Two General Services Administration supply store managers and two officers of a Maryland office supply firm pleaded guilty Wednesday to defrauding the federal government in a GSA bribery scheme that cost taxpayers $1.7 million in just three years.

The office supply firm, Hilles Associates of Westminster, Md., paid $1.3 million in bribes — cash, jewelry, appliances and other things — to managers of GSA office supply stores in federal buildings throughout the Washington, D.C., area, according to assistant U.S. attorney Daniel Clements.

In return for the bribes, the GSA store managers approved $1.7 million in GSA payments to the Hilles firm for office supplies that were never delivered to GSA, prosecutor Clements said in hearings in federal court here for the four men who pleaded guilty.

The Hilles firm kept the difference between the $1.7 million it fraudulently received from GSA and the $1.3 million it paid in bribes to the GSA store managers, Clements said in court.

The chairman of Hilles Associates, H. David Levyne, 44, and the firm's vice-president, Charles Oertel, 55, pleaded guilty Wednesday to defrauding the government, as did William Eason, 62, who ran the GSA supply store at the Navy 's Arlington Annex, and Robert Rawes, 58, who until his indictment last week was manager of the GSA supply store in the Jefferson Plaza federal office building in Arlington, Va.

The first convictions are the first in the ongoing federal investigations of widespread corruption in GSA, Fourteen other persons were indicted here last week in the investigation of the GSA supply stores.

Meanwhile, federal prosecutors in Washington are investigating a pattern of corruption in the manner that GSA managers of federal buildings contract for repairs and maintenance.

Loggers End Sympathy Strikes

PORTLAND (AP) — Sympathy strikes at 40 lumber processing plants on the United States west coast ended Wednesday after new talks were scheduled between some striking pulp and paper workers and manufacturers.

Members of the International Woodworkers of America and Lumber Production and Industrial Workers walked out a week ago in an effort to help break an apparent deadlock in the paper workers strike.

The sympathy strikes affected 19 Boise Cascade plants, 13 Crown Zellerbach plants and eight Georgia-Pacific operations and involved about 8,000 workers.

About 5,000 paper workers remain on strike at 28 mills in Oregon, Washington, Alaska and California. Workers at 27 of the mills are represented by the Association of Western Pulp and Paper Workers and the other strike involves the United Paperworkers International.

Negotiations were scheduled for today between the AWPPW and the Georgia-Pacific plant at Bellingham. Workers struck the plant July 10.

A federal mediator announced Tuesday that negotiations would resume next week between the AWPPW and seven Crown Zellerbach paper mills which were struck Aug. 5. Six of the mills have been operating with supervisory personnel.

Crown Zellerbach officials have said the company would only negotiate a three-year contract because they believe it is needed to maintain labor stability. Workers want a two-year pact.

Botha Lashes Canada Role

TORONTO (CP) — South Africa accused Canada and four other Western powers Wednesday of bowing to Marxist forces in the United Nations in their attempts to negotiate an independent Namibia, also known as South-West Africa.

South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha said in an interview with the CBC broadcast Wednesday, that his country had accepted a Western proposed plan originally put forward by Canada, the United States, Britain, France and West Germany.

However, Botha said another plan put forward later by the UN "deviated substantially" from the Western proposals, especially with regard to the number of UN troops that would be stationed in the territory during its transition to independence.

South Africa administers Namibia under a League of Nations mandate since abrogated by the UN.

"They (the Western powers) never discussed a figure of 7,500 troops with us," Both said. "The highest figure they ever proposed to us was 3,000."

Botha said that since the UN recognizes the black guerrilla group South-West Africa Peoples' Organization as the sole representative of Namibia, the organization has "therefore indicated that the United Nations is virtually an ally of SWAPO."

He pointed out that South Africa has accepted one-man one-vote as a basis for a proposed election, in Namibia, the removal of race discrimination, a mechanism for the release of political detainees and the stationing of a substantial number of UN troops to satisfy the UN that the election would be fair.

"I'm telling you that nothing we do will be acceptable. Every time they (SWAPO) will find some new reason, some other reason for not wishing to get down to election," he said in defending Pretoria's plan to conduct elections without UN supervision.

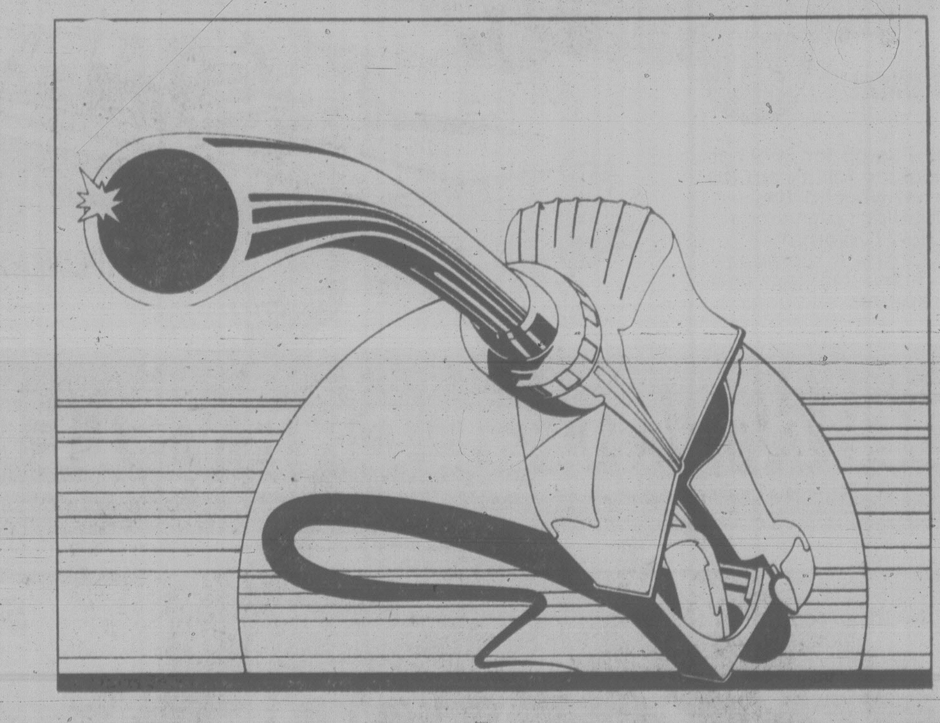
Tacoma Teachers Settle

TACOMA (AP) — An all-night bargaining session produced a tentative agreement Wednesday which won acceptance from both sides, ending the month-long Tacoma teachers' strike.

The district's 1,600 teachers were to report to classrooms today and school was expected to return to a near-normal basis, officials said. About 31,000 students were affected by the strike.

The Tacoma School Board Wednesday voted unanimously to accept the contract which had been approved less than two hours before by members of the Tacoma Association of Classroom Teachers, spokesmen said.

IS YOUR CAR'S TIMING CHEATING YOU OF MILEAGE?



A TANK OF ESSO EXTRA PREMIUM UNLEADED AND A $5.95* TIMING CHECK AND RE-SET WILL TELL YOU.

YOU COULD IMPROVE YOUR MILEAGE BY UP TO 5%.

A lot of cars that run on unleaded gas may also have their timing retarded. In fact, our survey shows that 1 out of 7 have their timing retarded an average of 4.6 degrees. This might get rid of engine knock but it also cuts down on fuel economy. And this could be the story on your car without you even realizing it. For $5.95, your participating Esso dealer can check and reset your engine's timing back to manufacturer's specifications. Then, you can fill up with Esso Extra Premium Unleaded and get the full benefit of this new high octane gasoline.

EXACTLY, WHAT IS TIMING?

Timing controls the exact moment when the spark plug ignites the fuel/air mixture inside the cylinders. If the spark comes too early or too late, you don't get full value from the gasoline you're using and you get less than full performance.

TIMING WILL ALSO AFFECT ENGINE KNOCK AND RUN-ON.

If your timing is off, you notice that premature or delayed ignition as a knock or pinging sound. It's especially noticeable on acceleration or going uphill.

Incomplete combustion which may also be caused by incorrect timing and/or gasoline, results in deposit build-up inside the cylinder and that leads to engine run-on after you shut off the ignition.

ASK YOUR PARTICIPATING ESSO DEALER.

If you are one of the thousands of Canadian motorists who have been having trouble with knock, run-on or poor mileage on your late model car, talk to your participating Esso dealer.

It could well be that your timing is off and that your car really needs a higher octane unleaded gasoline.

It's certainly worth $5.95 for the timing check and re-set to find out.

And a couple of tankfuls of new Esso Extra Premium Unleaded should prove that you're getting improved mileage and smoother performance.

We know that's what you want from your car. And your participating Esso dealer can help you get it.

*Or less. (Most cars until November 30, 1978.)

Sharp Israeli Eyes Foiled the Ship of Death

Washington Post

JERUSALEM — It was a plot that Alistair Maclean would be hard-pressed to match.

A cargo ship loaded to the gunwales with seven tons of high explosives approaches the coastline at full speed and suddenly unleashes a salvo of 45 Katyusha rockets. The captain locks the steering mechanism to head the vessel toward a fuel depot, and the seven-man crew jumps overboard and into a rubber dinghy to make a daring escape.

As the sailors race to safety, the rockets slam into the crowded seaside town, and the ship and fuel depot explode in an enormous conflageration, spreading panic in the enemy camp for miles around.

The plot, however was not the stuff of which a good novel is made, but a planned Fatah terrorist raid which Israel's government says was foiled when an Israeli naval patrol boat sank a bomb-laden freighter off the Sinai Peninsula coast about 20 miles north of the Straits of Tiran.

The Isreli defence forces Wednesday released the details of the planned Palestinian terrorist attack on Eilat, at the foot of the Gulf of Aqaba, which authorities said originated in the Syrian port of Latakia.

According to the government's account, the 50-yard-long cargo vessel, bearing a Cypriot flag but owned by a Fatah front organization, was spotted at 3:30 p.m. last Saturday by an Israeli patrol boat headed north toward Eilat.

The ship aroused Israeli suspicions because of what appeared to be rocket launchers covered by tarpaulins on her decks.

The Iraelis opened fire on the vessel, causing some of the munitions to explode, resulting in injuries to three of the seven Fatah crewmen.

The crew of a second Isreli boat boarded the freighter, authorities said, and found its hold stuffed with explosives and detonators and its deck crammed with Soviet-made Katyusha rocket launchers primed and ready for firing.

As the Israelis were rounding up the Fatah crew, the explosives in the hold began to burn, and shortly afterward the vessel exploded and sank, officials said.

Israeli authorities said the terrorist squad was led by Fatah Maj. Abdullah Jaloud, whom they identified as a rocket specialist.

One of several explosives experts aboard the ship, military officials said, had been a commando instructor for the terrorist squad which raided the coastal road near Tel Aviv last March, killing 37 persons. That raid triggered Israel's retaliatory invasion of Lebanon.

Duty-Free Boosted For U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has signed a bill that increases to $300 from $100 the amount of duty-free merchanise travellers may bring into the United States from foreign countries.

The bill also raises to $25 from $10 the value of duty-free gifts that may be sent to the United States.

The new personal exemption, which takes effect in 30 days, applies to persons who are out of the country for at least 48 hours and may be claimed once every 30 days.

The legislation imposes a flat 10-per-cent duty rate on purchases worth more than the $300 exemption and less tha $900.

Shadows Crowd On Sunny Jim. . .

BLACKPOOL (Reuter) — With such friends, British Prime Minister James Callaghan may have reflected this week, who needs enemies?

Although a general election is on the horizon, his Labor party's annual conference humiliatingly rejected Callaghan's plan for a fourth year of pay restraint, specifically his intention to hold wage rises in the next 10 months to five per cent.

But Callaghan and his finance minister, Chancellor of the-Exchequer Denis Healey, promptly gave notice that the policy would stay, although they offered to talk it over with the trade unions, who agreed.

As the prime minister largely credits pay restraint with fighting Britain's inflation rate to the present eight per cent from almost 30 per cent in 1975, it is a cornerstone of his economic policy.

With 57,000 Ford car workers already striking against the five-per-cent policy and others threatening to follow suit, Britons have a vision of a long, cold winter of confrontation and industrial unrest.

Thoughts reverted to Conservative Prime Minister Edward Heath's battle with the coalminers on just such a pay issue five years ago, which put power-starved industry onto a three-day working week and finally brought Heath down.

Where the Labor party and its conferences are concerned, however, things are not always as they seem.

The delecates meeting in Blackpool can only advise Labor governments and their resolutions can fall on deaf ears.

For example, the conference, which is dominated by left-leaning local parties, voted overwhelmingly to end the British nuclear missile deterrent — almost a ritual.

Nobody expects government ministers to rush back to London and give necessary instructions.

The conference is an annual display of the party's socialist conscience but the party has relatively few such members and strategists know that it is Sunny Jim's centrist appeal to the electorate that matters on general election day.

This might even be enhanced by successful talks with the trade unions, the traditional bogeys of Conservatives.

LEYLAND CHALLENGE OVER 5%

LONDON (Reuter) — Leaders of 100,000 British Leyland auto workers Wednesday voted to ask for pay raises worth about 30 per cent, representing another challenge to Prime Minister James Callaghan's anti-inflation policy of trying to keep pay increases to five per cent.

The demand will first go to the assembly line workers at the state-owned car company's 36 plants, where little opposition is expected, and then to the bargaining table.

GIRL RAPED, ARMS CUT OFF

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — A woman whose arms were chopped off during a sexual attack is not who she said she was, is not married as earlier reported and is only 15 years old, not 20, authorities disclosed Wednesday.

"We have learned by talking with the victim and tracing and talking with her relatives that she is a juvenile, initially from the state of Nevada and more recently from southern California," the Stanislaus County sheriff's office said in a statement about the woman earlier identified as Maria Vargas, 20.

The department said the woman met Norberto Vargas, 26, earlier identified as her husband, five months ago in southern California. But, it said: "No marriage exists between the two subjects.

"She is 15 years old," the statement added.

The woman, whose real name was not made public Wednesday, was found wandering nude Saturday near Interstate 5 in Stanislaus County, with her arms hacked off below the elbows. Officials say she had been raped and left for dead in a nearby canyon.

Noberto Vargas, who is awaiting trial on charges of raping a 15-year-old Sausalito girl, was transferred from the Marin County jail to a jail in Modesto after his girlfriend asked that he be brought to her bedside.

Deputies say they have been unable to find any connection between the attack on Vargas's friend and the rape charge pending against him.

Lay Off Us, Says Bulgaria

SOFIA (AP) — Bulgaria said Wednesday it knows nothing about the deaths in Britain of two Bulgarian defectors and accused Scotland Yard of waging a groundless campaign against this communist country.

Scotland Yard has said it is trying to determine whether the death of Vladimir Simeonov in a fall down the stairs of his London apartment is linked to the poisoned umbrella murder of another Bulgarian dissident.

Simeonov, 30, died Monday in London, three weeks after the death of Giorgio Markov. Markov claimed on his death bed he was stuck by a poison-tipped umbrella. Scotland Yard, which at first doubted his claim, later confirmed he had been murdered.

Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist chief James Nevill said investigators are trying to determine whether Simeonov was pushed down the stairs or fell.

Simeonov and Markov both worked for the BBC. Markov was noted for his charges of corruption and sexual scandals among Bulgaria's communist leaders.

The official BTA Bulgarian news agency said Bulgarian officials rejected "in the most categorical way" the "groundless campaign full of slanders and fabrications in connection with alleged participation of Bulgarian organs" in the deaths of Markov and Simeonov.

Markov's wife claimed he was killed by Bulgarian secret police.

"All these versions have not, and cannot have, anything in common with truth," BTA said. "And we qualify them as ill-intended propaganda against our country."

This Is No Ordinary Salad

EAST HAMPTON, N.Y. — As Jean Troisgros, with understandable enthusiasm, plunged his salad fork into his first course — a plate of salad greens tossed with truffles — it did smack of sudden poetic justice. After all, a few mornings ago this typewriter delivered itself of the thought that "salads served as a first course is an enormously unsophisticated and childish concept."

And here was this titan of the kitchen, one of the most celebrated chefs of Europe, giving the gastronomic lie to such a notion. But this was no mundane tossing together of quelques feuilles vertes. It was an inspired orchestration of greens and herbs and quickly sauteed thin medallions of chicken, the whole anointed with a celestial sauce, the soul of which was oil of walnut.

"The basic produce in North America is marvelous," he said; "the tomatoes in season, the greens, the lobsters, the corn on the cob.

"Your cream and flour are . . ." As his voice trailed off — politely — a listener could fill in the blanks, which spelled "dreadful." The cream has not enough body; the flour has had too many bleachings or other scabrous derring-do in the milling and can't compare with the flour used in French kitchens for baking in general and pastry-making in particular.

SALADE DE POULET TROISGROS
(Green salad with sauteed sliced chicken)

1 four-pound chicken or two pounds skinless, boneless chicken breasts
one-third cup salad sauce, approximately (see recipe)
16 cups mixed, loosely packed salad greens (use any tender greens in season such as oak leaf lettuce, red leaf lettuce, romaine, watercress and so on)
2 teaspoons coarsely chopped, fresh tarragon leaves
2 teaspoons coarsely chopped fresh basil leaves
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh chervil or parsley
salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
5 teaspoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
¼ cup chopped scallions (green onions)
4 teaspoons red wine vinegar
1 small black truffle, cut into fine strips, optional
2 teaspoons truffle liquid, optional.

1. Cut the whole chicken into serving pieces, separating the legs and thighs. Remove the skin and bone from the breast meat. Remove the skin and bone from the thigh meat. Cut the liver, if used, into half-inch cubes. Save the wings, carcass and legs for soup.

2. Set the pieces of chicken (or the skinless, boneless chicken breasts) on a flat surface and pound lightly. Cut the pieces on the bias into very thin slices of a nice size. As the slices are cut, arrange them in one layer on a sheet of waxed paper. Cover with another sheet or sheets of waxed paper and pound lightly with a flat mallet. Do not break the meat. Set aside.

3. Prepare the salad sauce in a large salad bowl as indicated. Set aside.

4. Add the salad green to the salad bowl and sprinkle with tarragon, basil and chervil.

5. When ready to serve, sprinkle the cubed liver with salt and pepper. Separately, sprinkle the chicken slices with salt and pepper.

6. Heat two teaspoons of oil in a small skillet and when it is very hot, almost smoking, add the liver pieces. Cook quickly, tossing and stirring until lightly browned, about 30 seconds.

7. Add the green onions and half the vinegar. Stir quickly over high heat and pour this over the salad greens. Add the truffles and truffle juice. Toss well. Spoon the greens onto from four to six salad plates set aside.

8. Heat the remaining oil in a large skillet and add the chicken slices. Cook about 30 seconds on one side and turn. Cook about 30 seconds on the other side. Arrange equal amounts of chicken neatly over each serving of salad.

9. To the skillet add the remaining vinegar. Stir. At the boil pour this over the salad and serve.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Salad Sauce

½ teaspoon finely minced garlic
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 tablespoon imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf
5 teaspoons red wine vinegar
5 tablespoons oil, preferably walnut oil available in specialty food shops where fine French imports are sold, or use olive oil.

1. Combine the garlic, salt, pepper, mustard and vinegar in a salad bowl large enough to contain 16 cups of salad greens when tossed. Using a wire whisk, gradually add the oil, stirring.

Yield: one-third cup, approximately.

Finnish scientists say: Baldness can be halted.

LONDON — Two Finnish scientists say they have designed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased within four weeks.

The product called Bioscal, contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hair and other dirt clogging the follicles — the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

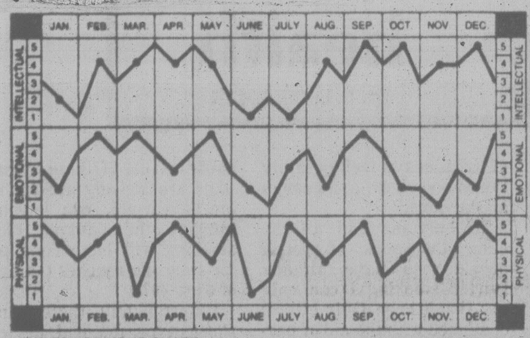
Bio-dex

Oct. 6/78
By Ken J. Michaels
Your computerized biorhythm
© BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978
Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:
Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- If shopping for clothes, remember your judgement may be poor. Better to wait a while.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- What may start out as a hard task could be turned into a fun project, especially if your emotional level is high.

11-15 Positive Cycle- It could be an exciting weekend if that special phone call is received soon.

Friendship is just about the most important thing any of us can ask for. Friends make the good times better and help you through the tough times. Bio-dex helps many readers keep old friends and make new ones. How? When your emotional level is low, don't get into arguments. When your intellectual level is high, help out a friend with some good advice.

Child Obesity on Increase

Food for Thought

By DR. JEAN MAYER
DR. JOHANNA DWYER

When most people think of obesity, they think of adults, and it's true that adult obesity is one of our major and most difficult health problems. In fact, between 30 per cent and 40 per cent of adult North Americans are significantly overweight, and the number appears to be growing.

But obesity is also a big problem with children. By current statistics, about one out of four youngsters is obese, and the alarming fact is that this figure, too, is on the rise.

In children, as in adults, obesity is both an emotional and a physical burden. Any number of reports have indicated that adults unconsciously shy away from fat children. And studies done by Dr. Mayer show that obese high school students have less chance of gaining acceptance into college (when their obesity is known) than students of normal weight who are equally qualified.

Other studies have shown that even kindergarten children find fat children less desirable as playmates. Little wonder that some investigators have found that obese children exhibit more personality disturbances.

As far as physical health is concerned, an overwhelming majority of obese children — as many as four out of five — become fat adults. And overweight is directly linked to some of our most serious diseases in adulthood — coronary heart disease, hypertension and diabetes.

It's obvious then, for all these reasons, that it is just as important to control obesity during childhood as it is in the adult years.

But as with adults, controlling obesity in children is not easy. The difficulty is compounded by the fact that children must get plenty of calories and nutrients for proper growth, but not so much that they develop patterns of overeating and put on excess weight.

Over the last few years, the use of what is called "behavioral modification" has become an accepted part of many dieting regimens for adults. The basic idea is that to be successful in dieting, it is as important to change eating habits as it is to change caloric intake. By "successful," of course, we mean a diet that not only gets the weight off but also keeps it off.

Behavioral modification was pioneered by one of our former colleagues, Dr. Albert Stunkard of the Department of Psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania. Coupled with a total program of exercise and a balanced reducing diet, behavioral modification has proved to be a promising adjunct to dieting regimens for adults. Now the method is being tried with children.

In a recent article in the American Journal of Diseases of Children, Dr. Stunkard and his associate, Dr. Kelly Brownell, assessed the effectiveness of several experimental approaches to behavioral treatment of childhood obesity — all of which show signs of success.

In one research study, a group of chronically overweight children from low-income families were asked to keep a daily record of what they ate as well as the caloric content. They were also instructed to eat more slowly and put their utensils down between bites as a further means of curbing their normal eating habits.

The average weight loss was about five pounds. Interestingly, the children whose mothers were normal weight lost more than those whose mothers were overweight.

Another research study sought to evaluate what added effect there is when parents participate with their children in attempting to alter "food behavior." In this study, one group of children attended the clinic alone; in a second group, mothers came by themselves and then instructed their children at home; and in a third group, mothers and children attended together.

Analysis of the results showed that there was no significant difference among the three groups. The results were equally good, but the group with both children and mothers attending the clinic together reported the greatest satisfaction with the treatment. Incidentally, as an added bonus, the mothers in the "mothers only" group also lost weight!

In yet another study with overweight adolescent girls, it was shown that highly individualized treatment may be more successful than group therapy. This finding is in contrast to the experience of weight-control clinics and groups like Weight Watchers, where group treatment is more successful for adults.

With children, the goal of dieting is not measured by weight loss alone, but by loss of excess fat, plus the slowing down of weight gain. The idea is to get down to a normal rate of weight gain in order to meet the needs of growth and good health. The best and safest method is to combine exercise with a moderate diet.

And it appears from these very preliminary reports that behavioral modification therapy can be as useful for overweight children as it has already become for obese adults.

Cucumber Hors D'Oeuvre

(Makes about 2 cups)

2 large cucumbers, peeled, cut in half lengthwise and seeded

1 tablespooon finely chopped onion

1 tablesooon finely chopped green olives

1 to 2 teaspoons finely grated lemon rind

1-4 teaspoon curry powder, or a bit more to taste

1-4 teaspoon ginger, or a bit more to taste

Salt an pepper to taste

8 ounces cream cheese, softened or cut in pieces

Chopped parsley and drained capers for garnish

Slice cucumber with appropriate blade. Toss with 1-2 teaspoon salt and transfer to a plate. Cover with a weight and leave for 30 minutes. Drain and squeeze cucumbers in a towel to remove all possible liquid. Return to processor with steel blade. Chop finely. Add onion, green olives and lemon rind and chop. Add seasonings. Mix. Then add cream cheese and puree until thoroughly mixed.

Place in a bowl and garnish with parsley (prepared in the processor) and capers. Alternatively, the mixture may be transferred to a wet, chilled 2-cup mold and placed in the refrigerator for 2 to 3 hours, then unmolded just before serving with melba toast. If well covered, this will keep in the refrigerator for two or three days.

If you are worried that the bread or cake you buy has too many artificial additives, the six-page folder subtracting additives? will give you peace of mind.

The folder states, for instance, that bakery products contain certain additives because these help them to remain fresher longer. Nutritional additives, such as minerals and vitamins, are an essential part of a balanced diet.

Without modern technology, bakery products would be stale the day after they are baked. This would lead to much waste at a time when half the world is hankering for more food.

You may think that modern food technology has lessened the nutritional value and safety of bakery products. The folder says this is not so. There is no scientific proof that foods without additives are safer.

The Canadian Government, through Health and Welfare Canada, is continually reviewing additives used in bakery foods. Additives may only be used if they maintain the nutritional quality of a food, enhance its keeping quality, make food more attractive to the consumer without being deceptive or provide essential aids in food processing.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I work at a motel, and I hear complaints daily about the high cost of accommodations.

Following is a partial explanation for the benefit of the innocent, who are unfairly penalized, and the guilty, who go unpunished. I speak on behalf of all motel and hotel owners who have no choice but to increase their rates.

I am convinced that honesty has become as out-dated as high button shoes and buggy whips.

Our motel has 170 rooms. When a guest checks out, it's not unusual for the room to be partially or wholly stripped of all towels, wash-cloths, toilet tissue, Kleenex, light bulbs, and even bed spreads, sheets, pillows and cases!

On the average, we lose $2 per room per rental. This does not include the cost in time, labor and paper work to replace the stolen items.

Perhaps if the public were informed of these facts, they might think twice before collecting souvenirs and household supplies. If not, the next time they visit our fair city, they can expect the rates to be even higher than before.—DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Thanks for a good letter. Also for reviving some vivid memories of my high school days.

My twin and I learned a lesson in honesty after returning from a football game at Sioux Falls, S.D. (We made the trip with about 100 other Central High School students on a special train from Sioux City, Iowa.)

When our parents discovered that we had brought home several "souvenirs" from a hotel in Sioux Falls (ashtrays, silverware, bath mat, etc.), they ordered us to pack up all the loot and mail it back to the hotel manager with our apologies. (We had to pay the postage, too!)

We also got a long lecture on honesty, and we have never forgotten it.

DEAR ABBY: I was an only child. When I was growing up, my parents moved around a lot, so I was practically raised by my grandparents. I really think of their family home as my family home.

They are getting along in years, and even though I am now married with chidren of my own, when I go to visit my grandparents I notice a lot of household items that bring back wonderful memories of my childhood. For example, an old water pitcher that was always on their table. It's not particularly valuable, but I'm sentimental about it.

I wouldn't want my grandparents (or anyone else) to think I am grabby, but I would just love to have that pitcher one day. My problem is, I don't know how to go about asking for it.

Any ideas?—SENTIMENTAL.

DEAR SENTIMENTAL: The next time you see your grandparents, let them know that you are sentimental about that old water pitcher, and if your grandparents are like most grandparents, you'll have it tomorrow!

your health

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

Few letters have more clearly pinpointed to me the essence of a major problem of young adolescents than the one that follows.

Lorraine M. writes:

"I am 18 years old and I have been smoking for five years. Lately I am up to a pack and a half a day. I depend on cigs so much it's getting me disgusted. I need one as soon as I get up, after meals, on the phone, when I'm out with friends and when I'm in an uptight situation. It's gotten out of hand.

"I've tried several times to quit, but can't seem to do it. Do you have any suggestions on how I could quit the habit? I feel I'd be much better off if I did stop. Also I have a sort of tight, heavy feeling in my throat and chest, and I cough all day long."

To Lorraine and all the other thousands of young people who have already started smoking I can only say that I hope their efforts combined with the aid of parents and doctors will help them break the habit.

To the many other thousands of youngsters who are tempted to embark on the "sophisticated" trail of smoking, I ask that they heed Lorraine's message.

Almost every parent has heard the line, "I just want to smoke a cigarette after meals with my friends. I can stop any time I want to." Hogwash! The habit is an insidious one that creeps up slowly, but persistently, and after a year or so young smokers are all on the pack-a-day routine.

It's a lot easier not to begin to smoke at all than it is to stop once the habit has taken hold. Lorraine can attest to that.

Yes, the heavy feeling in the throat and chest and the persistent cough can be attributed to tobacco, if no infection or other physical cause exists. If these symptoms are already present in an 18-year-old, can anyone imagine the damage that smoking will have done by the time she reaches the age of 30 or 40?

Unfortunately, there is no shortcut or magical device for helping you, Lorraine, break the habit. There are no drugs that can do it. Yet there is one force, and you've demonstrated that you have it, that can separate you from this dependency. The fact that you have written to me means that you have recognized a problem and confronted it in a mature way. Expressing your dissatisfaction, and realizing that tobacco is impairing your emotional and physical good health, must be considered the first giant step in ridding yourself of the smoking habit.

A good idea that you might pursue has been tried by others with considerable success. Small groups of young people, all determined to stop smoking, have formed their own "smoker's group therapy." Under their own supervison, they have been able to exert pressure on each other and have the satisfaction of seeing the entire group give up smoking.

Supplemented by excellent anti-smoking literature available, these sessions are made stimulating and productive. The pride in the accomplishment is enormous.

Lorraine, why don't you form your own group? Let me know how well it works for you.

BY WEIGHT, YOGURT HAS EDGE IN CALCIUM

Nutrition Buyline

QUESTION:

Is yogurt a better source of calcium than cottage cheese?

ANSWER:

By weight yogurt contains more calcium than cottage cheese. 100 grams or about ½-cup of yogurt contains 293 mg. of calcium, while the same amount of cottage cheese contains 211 mg. of calcium. However, they are both good sources of calcium and should often be included in your meals.

QUESTION:

Is there a connection between salt and heart disease?

ANSWER:

Excessive consumption of salt is a factor implicated in elevated blood pressure. Since high blood pressure is an aggravating factor in all types of heart disease, excessive salt in our diets should be avoided.

QUESTION:

Hurrah! School is in! The hitch is the school lunches every day. Do you have any suggestions to make them more interesting?

ANSWER:

Children are back at school and millions of lunches are being packed every day. A well-balanced lunch is necessary for good heath, especially for growing children, since about one third of their food needs comes from the lunch they eat. Variety is the spice of life for anyone eating a packed lunch. For variety and good nutrition, pack foods from each of the Four Food Groups.

Breads and Cereals Group

Whole wheat or whole grain bread or rolls; whole grain crackers; wholesome cookies made with oatmeal, peanut butter, dried fruits or nuts.

Meat and Alternates Group

Cold meat, fish, poultry, egg, peanut butter on whole wheat bread or bun; hard cooked eggs; leftover pieces of chicken or meat; beef, lamb, or ham soup; hot dog (place the wiener in boiling water in a thermos); chili, pork and beans, spaghetti and meatballs, macaroni and cheese, or leftover casserole in a thermos.

Milk and Milk Products Group

Cold milk in thermos; cheese stuffed in celery sticks, cheese in a sandwich or bun; cheese cubes, cottage cheese or yogurt can be taken with fruit or vegetables in a thermal jar; cream soup in a thermos.

Fruit and Vegetable Group

Finger foods (celery, carrot, turnip, green pepper, zucchini, cucumber, cherry tomatoes), vegetable salad, fruits in season; fruit juices in the individual cans can be frozen in the freezer overnight. Remove from the freezer at breakfast and place in a small plastic bag and put into the lunch bag. It will defrost by noon and keep lunch food cold.

Try something different, surprises are always fun! You could even pop in a note with a cheery message. Your local Health Unit has a good pamphlet called "Beating the Lunch Bag Blues" which will give you some further suggestions for packing interesting lunches.

Cheddar Remains No.1 in Canada

Although there are now more than 50 cheeses made in Canada, Cheddar is still the number one choice. It outsells, by far, any of the others, be them a simple Colby, an exotic Brie or an aromatic Limburger.

Cheddar had quite a head start on the others, being first made commercially in Canada in 1864. That was the year that Canada's first cheese factory, The Pioneer, went into operation at Norwich, Ont. Cheddar, like many cheeses, derived its name from the place where it was first made. The Cheddar Gorge in England was the birthplace of what was to become Canada's "Cheese of the Country".

There is no nutritional or taste difference between white and colored Cheddar. The recipe is identical; except for the addition of vegetable coloring for those who prefer it that way. In either case, 11 pounds of milk is required to make one pound of Canada's favorite cheese.

It is an international favorite, too, although its traditional overseas markets have been severely restricted by quotas and/or prohibitive tariffs. Back at the turn of the century, Canadian Cheddar was a booming export item. In 1904, for example, an incredible 234 million pounds were shipped to Great Britain.

Cheddar is the basis for most of our process cheeses; the slices, loaves and spreading cheese which, while convenient and versatile, fall somewhat short of Cheddar's more substantial flavor appeal. Not everyone agrees, though; many people with a bland palate think process cheese is just dandy. This is particularly true of younger palates; process cheese being a great food for children. It's excellent, too, for sauces and celery fillers, in sandwiches and canapes.

A notch beyond process cheese is Mild Cheddar, which must mature for at least 30 days. After 60 days, it is classified as Medium and becomes Old after six months. Some prefer an even more-ripened Cheddar and search out those marked "Aged" which indicates that the cheese is at least one year old.

This aging process most definitely affects the flavor characteristics as well as the texture of the cheese. By and large, the rule is that the longer it ages, the stronger the flavor.

In addition to these flavor variations, Cheddar is a remarkably versatile cheese. It is a must on anyone's cheese tray; it is an excellent accompaniment to fruit, makes hearty sandwiches and zesty main dishes. It has a virtually unending list of applications. In addition to its versatility and all-round excellent it is also one of the most nutritious foods available.

Berney Potatoes

(18 almond- or crumb-coated rolls; must be made in advance)

4 very large potatoes (or enough to measure 3 cups when cooked and mashed before additions)
⅓ c. milk
1 egg (first)
2 tbsp. butter (first amount)
½ tsp. salt
flour
1 egg (second)
2 tbsp. water
2 c. Shredded and finely chopped almonds or sesame seeds OR 1 cup each almonds and bread crumbs.
3 tbsp. butter (second amount)

Boil potatoes in salted water until SOFT. Drain and mash until very smooth. Add milk, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons butter and salt and beat until smooth. (NOTE: At this stage you have super mashed potatoes.)

Spread on shallow plate and CHILL. With buttered palms shape into rolls or balls or elipses. Have ready three shallow bowls — flour, second egg beaten with water, almonds (or sesame seeds or almonds and crumbs).

Roll potato shapes in flour, then in egg, then in almonds. Chill on plate to set and dry. One-half hour before mealtime melt the 3 tablespoons butter in a shallow pan, carefully add chilled potato rolls and roll each over in the butter to coat. Bake at 375° F. about 25 to 30 minutes or until crusty. These are sensationally good.

Beets Cluster

Beets sprout in clusters because each beet seed is actually a cluster of seven or eight seeds.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT . . .

Stir now and then when chilling any gelating mixture. It keeps the sides from jelling faster than the centre.
If you want to serve spareribs as an appetizer, have the butcher saw the rack in half the long way.
Cut pastry scraps into leaves, ribbons, and flowers, and press onto pie crust (use cold water as glue). Mark veins and petals with the dull side of a knife.
Chicken salad with an "Oriental touch is lighter and more delicate. Add bamboo shoots and scallions to shredded chicken, season with soy sauce, vinegar and vegetable oil, salt and pepper to taste. Toss with snow pea pods.
Potatoes were once used as currency in parts of Poland after World War I. Seems the value of the potato was more stable than paper money in the post-war upset.
But you'll find it doesn't cost a bushel to go out for a delicious meal.

Drapeau Tells of Advisers

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau says he consulted a top adviser of former Quebec premier Robert Bourassa about hiring a consulting firm which later failed to complete much-needed plans for the Olympic stadium.

Paul Desrochers, once described as the "grey eminence" of the Bourassa administration, knew the head of the firm, Regis Trudeau et Associes, Drapeau told a Quebec inquiry into the $1.27-billion cost of the 1976 Games.

The mayor said the city hired Regis Trudeau after Desrochers informed him that the firm had no major projects in the works. He did not elaborate on the extent of Desrochers's influence.

The firm began work on the 70,000-seat stadium in June, 1973, but was forced to withdraw from the contract in August, 1974, after being unable to complete the plans.

Later that year, Drapeau said, his attempt to negotiate a no-stike agreement with trade unions involved in Olympic construction fell through. This left the door open for labor problems that were to plague the construction effort.

Although most of Regis Trudeau's stadium plans had to be redone, the firm still received a full $1.7-million fee.

Inquiry lawyer Jacques Dagenais grilled the mayor on several alleged discussions with Desrochers, who was recently relieved of his duties with the Quebec Liberals by the new party leader, Claude Ryan.

Drapeau said he clearly recalled asking Desrochers whether the Regis Trudeau firm was working on any large projects for the Quebec government or whether it would be in the near future. The reply was negative.

Asked about another meeting with Desrochers in March or April, 1974, he said he could not remember, but would try to refresh his memory. He then said he could not recall asking Desrochers to intervene with Regis Trudeau to convince the firm to withdraw from the stadium contract.

COFFEE TAG DROPPING?

TORONTO (CP) — The Retail Council of Canada says coffee prices may drop after the 1978-79 harvest despite a recent frost in Brazil.

The council said that even if some Brazilian coffee production is lost, an abundance in Columbia and Central America should compensate for any shortfall.

Tea prices, which reached a peak in March before beginning a decline, also are expected to remain stable.

McCleery Denies Plan To Steal Dynamite

OTTAWA (CP) — Former RCMP Staff Sgt. Donald McCleery testified Wednesday that he had nothing to do with a case of dynamite before it was stolen from an explosives warehouse in Quebec's Eastern townships in the spring of 1972.

"My involvement with that case of dynamite was after the fact," McCleery, dismissed from the force Dec. 6, 1973, told a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

His testimony on the dynamite incident contradicted that of RCMP Sgt. Bernard Dubuc, who told the royal commission last month that at McCleery's orders he, Constable Richard Daigle and Cpl. Normand Chamberland made a midnight run to the warehouse southeast of Montreal.

While Chamberland, the driver, waited, Dubuc cracked the warehouse lock with a tire iron, then hefted the case of dynamite to Daigle who carried it back to the car.

It was then taken to Montreal, along with a case of detonator caps from another warehouse shed nearby, to be used by an RCMP informant trying to gain credibility with members of a terrorist cell.

An employee of Cichelieu Explosives testified last month that four cases of dynamite were missing when the theft was reported to Quebec Provincial Police after the break-in in 1972.

McCleery, who headed the G2 anti-terrorist unit in Montreal, noted that Dubuc and Daigle were with the G-4 unit set up to gather sources of information.

Had he asked Chamberland, a G-2 member, to accompany them?

McCleery said he hadn't. If he wanted the dynamite, there would have been a plan for getting it, "not Chamberland going off on his own to pick up dynamite."

McCleery testified that someone left the dynamite with him and he kept it under his desk for several days.

He said that Chief Supt. Donald Cobb, then an inspector who had a nearby desk, must have been aware the dynamite was there. He intimated that everybody in the office was.

At one time, McCleery said, the Mounties considered leaving the dynamite box in the hall to see whether the commissionaire who patrolled at night noticed it.

Commission counsel Ross Goodwin asked McCleery why he volunteered to keep the dynamite, which was later stored at his Laurentians cottage. McCleery said he has often asked himself that question.

Buchanan Sworn In

HALIFAX (CP) — John Buchanan will be sworn in today as the 19th premier of Nova Scotia.

Buchanan's Progressive Conservative government ousted the Liberal administration of Gerald Regan in a Sept. 19 general election in which the PCs took 31 of the legislature's 52 seats. The Liberals had 17 and the NDP the rest.

Buchanan will take the oath of office from Lt.-Gov. Clarence Gosse in a brief ceremony at Province House, the provincial legislature, a Buchanan aide said Wednesday.

Job Hunting Harder

QUEBEC (CP) — A poll of 1977 Laval University social science graduates shows that they are landing fewer jobs, looking longer to find them and are doing more part-time work.

The poll, conducted by the social science department, indicates an unemployment rate among 1977 graduates of 18.4 per cent — up from 16 per cent the year before.

Nineteen per cent settled for part-time work, compared with 8.6 per cent of the 1976 graduates, and it took 17 weeks to find a job, four weeks longer than in 1976.

Our South declarer in today's deal displayed nice technique in his handling of a delicate slam contract. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game.

2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♢	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

West's trump opening was an excellent lead for his side. Without the trump lead, declarer would have been about to ruff out both his losing diamonds. And with the favorable location of the club king, dummy's queen of clubs would have been promoted into declarer's slam-going trick. But West's trump lead effectively prevented declarer from ruffing out his two losing diamonds.

South won the opening trump lead with his ten-spot, after which he cashed the ace and king of diamonds. Next came a third diamond lead, which was ruffed with dummy's remaining trump. The king of hearts was then led, and East properly covered with the ace (had East elected to play to a low heart instead, South would have discarded his losing diamond). Declarer trumped East's ace.

At this point declarer had just one hope left: that the defender who had the diamond queen also had the king of clubs and would be forced to lead away from it, enabling the board's queen to win a trick. On the queen of hearts declarer would now be able to discard a club.

So declarer played the rest of his trumps, and then led his remaining diamond, which West took with the queen. West now had no choice but to lead a low club, hoping against hope that his partner had the club ace (a heart lead instead would enable dummy's queen and jack to win two tricks.)

Declarer put up dummy's queen of clubs, which won the trick. On the board's high queen of hearts declarer discarded his remaining low club, the nine-spot. The rest of the tricks were his.

Of course, if East had possessed the club king, the slam contract would have been defeated. But if this had happened, declarer could have attributed his defeat to circumstances beyond his control.

Simard Owes Success to Fonz?

OTTAWA (CP) — Part of the television success of French-Canadian singer Rene Simard is due to the American comedy Happy Days, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) was told Wednesday.

"There's little doubt that Rene Simard is watched by more viewers drawn first to Happy Days than would be the case if his program were scheduled following a Canadian documentary or a drama," said Jack Craine, director of programming for the CBC's English-language television network.

Craine was explaining to the CRTC why CBC still uses 30 per cent of its television air time in American programming even though "the logic lessens of using the national public network to duplicate images available only a channel away."

A second reason was that there are still one million Canadians in the Canadian North and in the northern parts of the provinces with no access to cable television.

"A selection of American comedy and adventure shows must be considered part of a balanced TV diet in Labrador City and Prince George," Craine said.

But perhaps the most important reason of all, he conceded, was the revenue the CBC and its affiliated stations derive from advertising sold for the American shows.

Craine said the CBC realizes that American programs must play a smaller part in the corporation's thinking and has set a goal for 80 per cent Canadian content in prime time by 1982. But the budget cuts inflicted by the government on the CBC made that goal a doubtful one.

Children Plead Case

TORONTO (CP) — Four Guyanese children refused visitor permits when they arrived in Canada last May for a three-week visit with relatives are still in Toronto, trying to convince Canadian immigration authorities they do not intend to stay in the country.

Deonarine Kissoom, 17, brothers Daneshwar, 14, and Mitra, 11, and sister Raywatte, 8, came to Toronto for a holiday with a married sister and a brother, both landed immigrants.

Toronto lawyer Roop Sharma said immigration officials felt the amount of money the four were carrying was high for such a short holiday, leading them to believe the children likely would remain in Canada illegally when their permits expired.

"But their family can afford the holiday," Sharma said.

"Their father owns a coconut plantation and employs 14 people. They (the children) have three uncles there who are lawyers. It's not a poor family."

Immigration officials issued an exclusion order against Deonarine, a new form of deportation under the Canada Immigration Act which prevents him from returning to Canada for one year.

Sharma took the case before the Federal Court of Canada, which quashed the exclusion order and the children, free on a $1,000 bond, now want to be recognized as visitors so they may return to Guyana without the stigma of a deportation order against them.

PRISON BEEFS LIES: WARDEN

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A prisoners' statement critical of visiting and correspondence procedures at Millhaven penitentiary is 99-per-cent lies, prison director Henry Neufeld said Wednesday.

Millhaven prison's Odyssey Group complained of the prison's lack of open visiting, arbitrary treatment of visitors and irregularities in the delivery of prisoners' mail.

Neufeld said Howard Brown, one of the prisoners who signed the brief, has admitted that most of the statements were inaccurate and were used to cause controversy.

Prisoners' mail, with exception of letters from members of Parliament, is opened at the prison, but the prisoners said they suspected guards also misdirect, fail to deliver and read prisoners' mail.

Neufeld said mail occasionally is misdirected by honest error when prisoners have the same names or an incorrect cell number is used.

Decision On UIC Savings

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial manpower ministers will meet in coming weeks to decide how to use savings from tightening up the unemployment insurance benefits program, Prime Minister Trudeau says.

In a letter to Ontario Premier William Davis, sent last week and released Wednesday, Trudeau said the government wants to use the unemployment insurance fund for creeating jobs "as rapidly as it becomes possible and effective to do so."

Currently, the national jobless rate is 8.5 per cent and nearly 900,000 are unemployed.

The prime minister's letter to Davis comments on a number of aspects of the economy, and repeats that Ottawa intends to reduce its transfers to the provinces this year and next by $370 million.

Institute Slaves In B.C.?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court action says that the provincial government enslaves and fails to pay the minimum wage to patients at the forensic psychiatric institute in Coquitlam.

The action was filed by Anthony Lemay, who is detained in strict custody at the institute where patients are held who have been found unfit to stand trial on criminal charges or found not guilty by reason of insanity.

Lemay says that as a scullery laborer at the institute he has been told by staff members that if he does not work he will be punished by being detained in the ward and having his pay reduced.

He says patients being held in strict custody are threatened with harsher terms of custody and pay reduction for any refusal to work.

Lemay works a 25-hour week sorting and peeling potatoes used in meals at the institute and is paid $5 a week. If he refuses to work at any time he gets paid $3.50 a week, he says.

Lemay says that forcing anyone held at the institute to work violates laws abolishing slavery in B.C., and he seeks an injunction to stop such treatment.

Defendants in Lemay's action are the Queen and Dr. John P. Duffy, executive director of the institute.

Seat Safety Queried In Plane Crash Inquest

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A lawyer for one of the 105 persons injured when an Air Canada DC-9 crashed at Toronto International Airport asked Wednesday why the aircraft's manufacturer did not use seats up to the standards used on military aircraft.

Lawyer Dennis Lane was questioning Hamilton Moy of McDonnell Douglas Corp., who testified at a coroner's inquest into the death of two persons killed in the June 26 crash that the DC-9's seats had been built to withstand forces greater than those required by the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration.

Moy, an interior engineering supervisor, said the seats were designed to deform or bend at six Gs, a pressure equal to six times the force of gravity, and to break or separate at a pressure of 12 Gs.

Moy said bending absorbs some impact in a crash and to remain fixed beyond 12 Gs may be more dangerous. After questioning by Lane, Moyer said the company builds pilot seats in military aircraft to withstand 40 Gs.

Asked why the same standard was not provided for DC-9 passengers, Moyer said it would be possible from an engineering standpoint but impractical.

Lane asked whether cost was what made it impractical and Moyer said weight is a major consideration.

"Isn't weight the same as cost?" asked Lane, referring to the fact that heavier seats would mean fewer fare-paying passengers could be fitted into a plane.

Irwin Childs, 43, a Toronto salesman, died of suffocation after his seat broke loose and he was crushed beneath the seat in front of him.

Childs was in the seat directly behind that of the other man killed, J. Frank Scrase, 75, of Victoria. Rescuers said both men were still in their seats with their seat belts on and that Scrase's seat had to be wrenched from the floorboards to extricate Childs' body.

Dr. Gordon Longfield, a pathologist, testified that Childs suffered only minor cuts in the crash and he died of suffocation. The pathologist said Childs might have survived if rescued within five minutes.

Testimony of police officers indicated it was 22 minutes before Childs was freed.

Sgt. John Gray of Peel regional police said the general confusion prevented rescuers from freeing the trapped man immediately.

A crash investigator for the federal transport ministry said several pieces of rubber, one nearly as big as a golf ball, were found in the plane's right engine.

Brian Aston, an engine expert, said the rubber broke most of the vanes of the low-pressure compressor at the front of the engine.

Compressors in a jet engine pack in air, which is mixed with fuel and burned to blast out of the back and provide thrust.

Aston said the engine lost 60 per cent of its power when the rubber struck and damaged it.

The inquest has heard that loss of power in the engine made it impossible for Captain Reginald Stewart to get effective reverse thrust from the engines to stop the plane in time.

Stewart and co-pilot Douglas Carnegie testified they jammed on the brakes and kept maximum pressure on them after deciding to abort takeoff, but the plane would not slow down.

Joseph Bajada, deputy chief of the transport ministry's flight service branch, said tests after the crash revealed nothing wrong with the brakes.

When Billy C. Turned to AA

WASHINGTON — Billy Carter's much-publicized beer drinking almost broke up his marriage until he sought help briefly from Alcoholics Anonymous, his sister writes in a just-published book entitled Brother Billy.

Ruth Carter Stapleton, the evangelist wife of a Fayetteville, N.C., veterinarian, writes that Billy — the only brother of U.S. President Jimmy Carter — and his wife Sybil "had come close to divorce when oceans of beer began to separate them" during the early 1960s. He attended AA meetings for three months.

The group "helped Billy get away from the hopeless feeling he had carried around for five years," his sister says.

The book portrays the president's 41-year-old brother as a complex man.

Despite his self-cultivated image as a beer-drinking, wise-cracking redneck, his sister says the real Billy is sensitive, intelligent and loyal to his friends.

Double Trouble for U.S. Military

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Paul and Phillip Cassibry have military and medical personnel at the army hospital in Fort Benning seeing double. For years the twins — both chaplains in the U.S. Army — were separated by their assignments. Now the army has placed them both at Benning and the confusion has started. Maj. Phillip Cassibry had been at the post about a year before his brother arrived, and he already was well-known at the military hospital. Even when they were assigned to posts on opposite sides of the globe, their identical features were sometimes a problem. When Paul Cassibry, also a major, was serving in Vietnam, his brother was approached at Fort Gordon, Ga., by a lieutenant colonel who suddenly demanded: "What are you doing here?"

"I'm assigned here," Cassibry answered.

"I don't understand. I just left you in Vietnam," the other officer said.

BUFFALO — The operators of Buffalo's Capri Theatre thought they had an early-warning system all worked out, but they weren't prepared for an undercover judge. Police officer John Dugan Jr. said the theatre had lined its box-office walls with photographs of Buffalo's 12 City Court judges, possibly because under recent court rulings, a judge must view a film that is suspected of obscenity and find probable cause for prosecution before he can authorize police action. "If they see a judge or a policeman, they press a button connected to the projection booth and the projectionist switches immediately from hard-core pornography to soft-core pornography," Dugan said. But he added the early-warning system failed when Judge Michael McCarthy, sporting a full beard and wearing blue jeans and sneakers, entered the theatre undetected. Dugan said the judge found probable cause for prosecution after viewing a film called P.

NEW YORK — Bisexual bank robber John Wojtowicz, whose bizarre bank heist was the basis for the movie Dog Day Afternoon, says he must get a job before the end of the month or go back to jail. "At places where they've known about who I am, they never say 'no' right out, but I never hear from them," he said.

Tammy Wynette Kidnapped, Beaten

NASHVILLE (UPI) — Country singer Tammy Wynette was kidnapped Wednesday from a shopping centre by a masked man who choked her with a piece of pantyhose and drove her to a rural area 80 miles away where he slapped her and kicked her out of her car.

"They tried to kill me. I don't know why, but they tried to kill me," Miss Wynette told authorities after her abductor kicked her out of her canary yellow Cadillac near Pulaski.

Miss Wynette, 36, a four-time winner of the Country Music Association's top female vocalist award was treated at the Giles County Hospital at Pulaski for cuts and bruises and then sent home.

The Tennessee Highway Patrol and the Giles County Sheriff's Department said today that a bulletin was issued for a late model, blue station wagon with two men in it. However, no warrants for specific individuals were issued.

Authorities said they did not know the motive or how many people were involved in the abduction.

Mildred Lee, Miss Wynette's mother, said the singer had gone to the Green Hills shopping centre to pick up a birthday present for her daughter, Georgette, 8.

U.S. 31A exit about 15 miles from the Alabama border.

Mrs. Lee said her daughter never got a good look at her abductor.

Miss Wynette has been married five times and is the mother of four daughters.

Peonies: Lots of Variety

Peonies are liked by some home gardeners and disliked by others, possibly because they know only the red bomb-like blooms of Paeonia officinalis.

Even the officinalis group contains 10 or more varieties ranging in color from pure white through soft pink, salmon-rose, salmon-orange, carmine-rose, to the frequently seen dark red.

Virtually unknown to home gardeners are the early, mid-season, and late-flowering peonies, double flowered in the Paeonia albiflora section, and the single-flowered group which includes the Japanese singles.

These are the kinds with the interesting summer foliage which turns to true fall colors in September and is so often seen in flower arrangements at fall shows.

In the albiflora section, all with double flowers, there are some 21 varieties which flower early, 26 mid-season and 23 late flowering, to cover a flowering period from early June until late July.

In this group are names which are high on the list of varieties used by flower arrangers for late spring and summer, such as Felix Crousse (red), Festiva maxima (double white with crimson flecks), Karl Rosenfield (bright crimson), Monsieur Jules Elie (large pink), and Sarah Bernhardt (deep rose-pink, salmon tipped). All are long lasting as cut flowers.

The Japanese and the singles bear flowers that close at night to protect the pollen on the large cushion of stamens filling the centre of each bloom, with over 50 varieties from which to choose. These flowers remain on the plants for seven to 10 days.

As if this was not sufficient for any peony enthusiast, there are at least 21 species and hybrids of species, 19 varieties of Paeonia suffruticosa (the tree peony) and eight extremely choice varieties in Paeonia lemoinei, the result of crossing Paeonia lutea (yellow) with the tree peony.

As mentioned frequently in this column, peonies do not like being disturbed. There are plants known to have been in one place for 50 years, yet have never missed a flowering season. In the peony we have one herbaceous perennial that does not need renewing every three to five years.

Occasionally, when replantning the garden or making changes to existing buildings, peonies have to be moved. Since the peony has a very short resting period, approximately from Sept. 15 to Oct.15, lifting and replanting should be done within the next 10 days.

Remove the topsoil and break up the subsoil one spade deep. Mix rough, partially decayed compost with the subsoil.

Mix screened compost with the topsoil, making a 50-50 mix. Place some of this mixture in the planting hole, then try the clump of tubers for depth. Fill in with topsoil until the top of the tubers are not more than two inches below the level of the surrounding soil.

Gently firm the fill to prevent sinking and half-fill the hole with the topsoil mixture. Pour in water to drive out air, and allow to drain away before the balance of the topsoil is added.

With plenty of humus in the soil and shallow planting, flowering should be normal next year.

When planting newly purchased single tubers, prepare a large size hole in the same way, because it will only be a year or so before there is a clump of tubers to fill the space.

Rigged Dredging Bids Altered Estimates

TORONTO (CP) — An engineer told an Ontario Supreme Court jury Wednesday that public agencies, including harbor boards in Toronto and Hamilton, may have been basing estimates for dredging work on misleading information.

Keith Oglesby, senior engineer for the St. Lawrence Seaway, said bid-rigging on dredging contracts in the early 1970s would have had a multiplier effect on estimating the costs of later dredging contracts.

"It was like trying to measure something with an 18-inch ruler," he said. "Using an 18-inch ruler, your measurments would always be too large by the historical evidence. This led us to believe that prices were reasonable, although they were inflated."

Oglesby was testifying at the fraud conspiracy trial of 11 dredging company executives and nine companies charged with defrauding public agencies of about $4.3 million between 1969 and 1975 by rigging bids on dredging contracts.

The Crown contents that successful bid-rigging led to a built-in system of inflated dredging contract bids.

Crown Attorney Roderick McLeod has said that in four dredging contracts — three in Toronto and one in Hamilton — bid-rigging was involved and public agencies over-estimated the costs of the work because they based their bids on previous work where bid-rigging had taken place.

In one case, the dredging costs of a contract were deliberately raised to 95 cents from 65 cents a cubic yard, McLeod said. In the Hamilton case, a tender on the contract had to cover a $160,000 payoff to a public official.

Oglesby told the court that government agencies have since altered their procedures for estimating.

CANADIAN TOPS PHILIPPINE PEAK

MANILA (AP) — Canadian Miguel Cassan, reported missing for a week, walked into a tourism office in the southern Philippines on Wednesday, cut and badly bruised but successful in his attempt to scale the Philippines' tallest peak in bad weather, the Philippine news agency reported today.

Cassan, 35, set out Sept. 23 for the summit of the thickly jungled 3,000-metre Mount Apo in Davao province, 950 kilometres southeast of Manila. He failed to show up after the four days the climb and descent usually take, the news agency said.

Worried officials in Davao and nearby Cotabato province, where Cassan had started out, mounted a search. On Monday Cassan, his bare feet cut and his arms and legs bruised, bumped into one of the search parties with his three guides.

The agency quoted Cassan, whose home address it did not give, as saying he decided to push for the top of Apo in spite of heavy rains brought by tropical storm Lola. On the way down, Cassan said, they would not have been able to cross six swollen leech-infested rivers were it not for help from three rattan gatherers they ran into.

Back at the Davao city office of the ministry of tourism, Cassan was rewarded for his troubles with a medal bearing the inscription: "I climbed Mt. Apo."

Fumes Sicken Students

PATERSON, N.J. (UPI) — Fumes, possibly from a chemical sealer, sickened more than two dozen people Thursday in a Passaic County College building.

Twenty-seven persons were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital minutes after the outbreak in Academic Hall shortly before noon. Some of the victims were unconscious.

College officials said about 300 to 400 people were in the building at the time and all were evacuated. Officials urged anyone who noticed symptoms of dizziness or nausea to go to a hospital immediately.

A college spokesman said workmen were installing a floor in the building cafeteria and it was possible the fumes came from a chemical sealer.

Some of the victims were sickened at their desks, the spokesman said, but others did not have a reaction until they left the building.

"It's a delayed reaction in some cases, with people passing out a half hour afterward," the spokesman said.

While U.S. Curbs N-Plants, Soviets Push Forward

Washington Post

OBNINSK, U.S.S.R. — In contrast to the United States, where President Carter has moved to restrict the use of plutonium, the Soviet Union is developing it as a nuclear fuel to generate electricity.

The Soviets are in the midst of a construction program that in two years will find them generating 720,000 kilowatts of electricity from the two largest plutonium breeders in the world.

If no unforeseen difficulties are encountered in these two plants, the Soviets plan to start construction in 1983 of a third breeder that will more than double their breeder-produced electric capacity.

The United States does not operate a breeder electric plant and has no firm plans to build one. Carter ordered a halt to the proposed Clinch River, Tenn. breeder reactor, which would have produced 500,000 kilowatts of power, to find an alternate nuclear process that does not breed plutonium.

Plutonium breeder reactors produce their own source of fuel and do not rely on what many view as a diminishing supply of uranium. Critics of the process complain that the reactors also produce plutonium, which can be used to make nuclear weapons.

Carter opposes development of the breeder plants for that reason and has urged other nations to follow suit. Carter has also defered indefinitely U.S. plans to produce plutonium for civilian use.

Indications here are that civilian nuclear energy technicians receive only small amounts of plutonium for experimental use from the Soviet military establishment. The overwhelming bulk of the Soviet plutonium is controlled by the military, Western experts think.

"We don't see any difficulties moving to plutonium," said Mikhail Troyanov, deputy director of the Institute of Physics and Power Engineering. The institute, 80 miles southwest of Moscow, is where the Soviet nuclear power program was born 24 years ago.

"After 1990, breeders should be built in the Soviet Union in large numbers," Troynaov added.

Troyanov was speaking to American science writers on a trip arranged in co-operation with the Soviets by the Atomic Industrial Forum, a Washington-based trade association. It is made up of major nuclear suppliers including Westinghouse and General Electric. The forum vigorously opposed Carter's efforts to stop the Clinch River breeder reactor.

Soviet nuclear leaders, while not criticizing Carter's Clinch River cancellation, question the wisdom of the move. The Soviets say they see no alternative to plutonium as a replacement for what they say is an inevitable dwindling of uranium supply.

There is a worldwide debate on how much uranium can be dug out of the earth's crust, in part because uranium is hard to find and in part because mining interests are only beginning to explore aggressively for it.

The Carter administration takes the optimistic view that there is as much as 4 million tons of extractable uranium in the United States. The National Academy of Sciences believes the United States can hope to mine only one third that much.

The Soviet Union does not advertise the size of its uranium reserves, except to point out that they are not limitless. The Soviets already import raw uranium ore from East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

While clearly ahead of the rest of the world in engineering electric plants to burn plutonium, the Soviets have had their share of trouble getting there.

The Soviets placed their first breeder near Shevchenko on the eastern shore of the Caspian Sea, a desert where oil, natural gas, manganese and phosphates are produced. The plant was built to produce electricity and also steam to desalt Caspian seawater for industry in the surrounding desert.

In 1974, one year after the Shevchenko breeder went into operation, one of the six loops of tubs that carry liquid sodium metal to transport heat from the nuclear reactor to the steam generators swelled and broke. The accident that followed mixed 125 gallons of water with one ton of sodium, more than enough to start a flash fire.

Parts of the Western press described the fire as an explosion, saying that U.S. spy satellites had witnessed the accident. The West had no details of what really happened until Soviet nuclear scientists began a year ago to tell their colleagues in the West what took place.

Sodium is a combustible metal that will ignite on contact with water in a violent enough way to release explosive hydrogen from water. One American nuclear engineer said that the Soviets described the incident at Shevchenko as "something like a grain elevator explosion" but that nobody was killed or injured. The Soviets insist the accident was not serious enough to shut down the plant.

"This failure was so insignificant," Troyanov said, "that not only was it impossible for sputniks to see it but the local populace didn't even notice it."

Whoever noticed it, the accident has proved to be costly and time consuming for the Soviet Union. The ruptured coolant tube still has not been repaired, forcing the Shevchenko breeder to operate ever since at 65 percent of its rated power — where it is to stay until next year, when a new steam generator is shipped from Czechoslovakia and a new coolant loop installed.

The incident at Shevchenko may have had something to do with the delays the Soviets have encoutered with their second big breeder, a 600,000-kilowatt plant being built near Belyoyarsk in the Ural Mountains.

The Belyoyarsk breeder has been under construction since 1968 and was to be finished in 1973. Officials now say it will be ready next year or the year after. Troyanov insists the Shevchenko accident did not cause the Belyoyuarsk delays. He blamed "normal machinery and construction delays."

Belyoyarsk will use an entirely different kind of sodium coolant.

Soviet nuclear experts say the answers to the questions concerning plutonium lie in its control, not in a search for alternates.

"We must rely on the nonproliferation treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons," Igor Morozov, deputy-chairman of the State Committee on Nuclear Energy, said in a recent article. "The answer is to enlarge the number of treaty adherents."

Norozov made other suggestions about plutonium: Poison the fuel with a little radioactivity before using it so nobody can divert it to a bomb, burn up more of the starting fuel so the kinds of plutonium it breeds will not be the kind that is best for bombs. But don't turn your backs on plutonium, he said.

U.S. Spy Stations Reopen

WASHINGTON (WP) — Turkey will permit the United States to reopen four strategic intelligence installations for monitoring Soviet military activities that were shut down three years ago in retaliation for the U.S. arms embargo against Turkey.

The decision by Turkey's National Security Council was disclosed by the Turkish press. A formal goverment announcement is expected Wednesday.

The move follows the repeal last week of the congressional ban on the sale of U.S. arms to Turkey. It opens the way for a full resumption of bilateral military cooperation and strengthening of NATO defenses in the Mediterranean.

The four installations include facilities regarded as being of exceptional intelligence gathering value because their long-range radars and other sophisticated gear are capable of tracking Soviet missile activity over wide areas of the Ukraine, Central Russia and Soviet Central Asia.

In opposing the embargo imposed after Turkey's 1974 invasion of Cyprus, U.S. officials insisted that the facilities are of enormous value to national security. Among other things, they were privately described as providing one of the key means for monitoring Soviet compliance with any strategic arms limitation accords.

Some officials here now concede that the functions of the four bases were partly absorbed by other intelligence facilities. Yet, the reopening of the four bases directed at the Soviet Union is seen as a symbolic move of considerable political importance.

Charles at 30. . .

The Maturing Of a Prince

LONDON (UPI) — The most remarkable thing about the upcoming 30th birthday of Prince Charles is that he celebrates it as a bachelor despite the most concentrated attack on the freedom of a young man in our time.

For a decade or so many of the most beautiful women in the kingdom — and elsewhere — have been pursuing the Heir to the Throne, some of them in the hope of a future as the Queen of England and others with lesser, more transient ambitions. A goodly number have caught up with him — or it is vice versa? — but he still appears to be firmly fancy free.

Birthdays are usually family affairs in the House of Windsor. Buckingham Palace would ordinarily have expected Queen Elizabeth to preside over a lunch for her son and heir on his birthday, Nov. 14, there or at Windsor Castle. But the date coincides with the start of a four-day state visit by President Antonio Namaho Eanes of Portugal — Britain's oldest ally — so they may settle for something informal.

Charles, gradually learning more and more of the mechanics of the throne, will play a prominent role in the state visit.

And, when that is over, impatient unofficial matchmakers will wait to see with whom his name is next linked though the list of girls past is already long enough to indicate he has inherited the eye, if not also the stamina, of his fickle ancestor King Henry VIII.

Regality personified, this year in London

The Heir Most Hounded Since Girls Lost Their Heads Over Henry

'One thing to pop into bed with a pretty girl. . .another to make your life with her!'

At least one member of the royal circle believes Charles is in no hurry to choose a bride. He was widely and anonymously quoted by one source as saying: "It's one thing to pop into bed with a pretty girl, it's another to make your life with her." The identity of this source is well known and where Charles is concerned he speaks with authority.

If there were any doubters, they were stilled by another who must be accepted as knowing how Charles' views his romantic future — the lovely Lady Sarah Spencer, 23, who spent a holiday with him (and friends) in Switzerland. Lady Sarah is the daughter of wealthy Earl Spencer whose forthcoming sale of family silver may gross nearly $5 million. She is kin to the Duke of Marlborough and the late Sir Winston Churchill. They don't come much more eligible than that.

Asked if she had drawn any conclusions from her holiday, Lady Sarah wiped out the chances of all of Charles's 1978 crop of escorts with:

"He doesn't want to marry. He's not ready for marriage."

It takes the right kind of background to accept the restrictions of living in a pageant, although the anonymous royal source seemed to think an American would be possible — he said it was a pity there was no one around like Princess Grace (Kelly) of Monaco.

Notwithstanding the signs pointing the other way, the British media are manfully trying to find Charles a bride. They have revived Princess Marie-Astrid of Luxemburg, who was their hot favorite when Buckingham Palace was insisting he had hardly met the lady. This time the story is that they will both be guests of King Baudouin of Belgium at Laekan Palace in late November. Marie-Astrid is eligible in every way except religion. She is a Roman Catholic and Charles to keep the Throne must marry in the Church of England.

Norman St. John Stevas, a prominent member of the Conservative party in Parliament, recently wrote in the Catholic newspaper The Universe that Charles should be free to marry a Roman Catholic without having to give up the throne. Charles has dated Catholic girls and was once reported to have lightheartedly remarked to a Catholic bishop: "All the girls I really like are Roman Catholics. What are you going to do about it?"

Charles' most recent escort is considered too young for anything other than dinner and a dance. She is pretty Elizabeth Manners, 19, niece of the Duke of Rutland. Charles met her at the Rutland stately home to which he was no stranger since he had previously dated one of the duke's daughters. Elizabeth is also being courted by the Marquis of Blandford, heir to the Duke of Marlborough.

ACCIDENT VICTIM AWARDED $167,000

A 29-year-old Comox man has been awarded $167,282 damages for injuries suffered in a car accident near Port Alberni more than five years ago.

Mr. Justice D.E. Andrews, in a written judgment, said Alexander Ronald Bell was a passenger in a vehicle owned and operated by Barry Allan Ross "so negligently that it left the highway whereupon the plaintiff was severely injured."

Liability was settled Aug. 16, 1977, and assessment of damages was heard in Victoria March 10.

Bell suffered head and facial injuries described as extremely severe by Andrews as well as marked personality change and serious cosmetic defects to the head and face.

He had worked as hook tenderman for MacMillan Bloedel but now had to work as a dryer feederman in a plywood mill for $9,000 less a year.

Andrews said Bell was a young man who "has been cruelly felled and reduced to a stump of what he could have been." He won't engage meaningfully in athletics and other forms of exercise which he had loved.

"His handicap is considerable, his loss of enjoyment of life is substantial," he said.

Bell was awarded $16,038 for past earnings loss, $60,000 for general damages, $87,000 for future earnings loss and $4,244 special damages.

Smoke Alarm Order

Smoke detectors will be installed in every room and hallway in every licensed nursing home in B.C., Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Wednesday.

The estimated $200,000 cost for the 10,000 detectors will come from Provincial Lottery funds.

There are an estimated 17,000 licensed nursing home beds with an average of two to a room in the province's 522 community care facilities.

About 8,500 devices will go into the sleeping rooms with the remainder in hallways and recreational areas.

Gardom said a number of private nursing home fires in B.C. and other provinces have underlined the urgent need for early-warning systems in residences for the elderly.

"We owe it to our senior citizens to provide the most sophisticated fire protection technology available," Gardom said. "I think all will agree this is an appropriate use of lottery revenue."

Gardom didn't say when bids to supply and install the detectors will go out, but he said the Fire Marshal's Office will screen applications and provide technical advice to allow the installation to proceed without delay.

Services Before Taxes

WASHINGTON (WP) — Americans aren't nearly as angry at how much they have to pay in taxes as they are at how little they get from government in return, a national poll by The Washington Post suggests.

The results indicate that the so-called "tax revolt" across the country is aimed less at taxes than at the quality of government employees' service, which most people perceive as poor.

People in all regions say, by 3 to 1, that they would vote for any measure such as California's Proposition 13 that would cut federal, state or local taxes.

At the same time, however, two out of three surveyed say they would prefer to see taxes kept at present levels if only government could be made to work, rather than have taxes and the level of government services reduced.

That does not mean, of course, that people are unconcerned about taxes. But it does put things in a somewhat different perspective from the one most often heard.

Many people see tax cuts as a way of elimiating waste in government and [illegible]ing public officials to become more efficient. Many others feel government won't become more efficient even with sharp tax cuts.

In all, seven of every eight persons in the Post survey said they are more concerned about the way tax money is spent than the amount of taxes they pay. The great majority do not want cuts in specific programs, such as welfare.

Their real concern, the survey suggests, is that it is the bureaucracy, not the public, that benefits from taxes. Tax money is seen as largely wasted by local, state and federal governments that have padded payrolls and employees who are overpaid, lazy, discourteous and inefficient.

MORE THAN 1,000 DEAD

Syrian Pounding Destroying Beirut

Times News Services

The Syrian bombardment of Beirut's Christian districts continued unabated today after an all-night pounding, the Lebanese capital's Christian radio station said today.

More than 1,000 dead or wounded Lebanese were reported in the first seven days of fighting that began Sept. 27.

The Christians' Voice of Lebanon gave no new casualty figures but said four Syrian army trucks full of bodies of Syrian soldiers killed in the fighting were seen driving away from Beirut.

The Christian broadcast said Syrian shelling of East Beirut and its environs did not cease once during the night.

The conflict that has destroyed much of the Christian sector of east Beirut is spilling over into the western entertainment and commercial centre, an area that in better times earned Beirut the name "Paris of the Middle East."

In what diplomats saw as a bid to rally civilian morale, the rightist militias vowed to turn their guns against Syria should the battles continue.

The fighting has raged virtually uninterrupted, without even the morning lulls of the civil war. Militia officials said it had spread to the plush hill resorts of Bickfaya, Broumana, and [illegible] as well as the ski town of Faraya.

The Syrians — dominating the 30,000-man Arab League peacekeeping force that ended the Lebanese civil war 23 months ago — swapped hit-and-run raids with the outgunned militias but there was no major change in ground position.

Phalangist radio warned Christian civilians beginning their fifth straight day in makeshift basement shelters that the Syrians were heavily reinforcing and that no end to the fighting appeared in sight.

Lebanese president Elias Sarkis was in urgent telephone contact overnight with Syrian President Hafez Assad, government and diplomatic sources said.

The sources said the talks focused on securing crucial Syrian approval for a peace plan proposed by France and backed by a number of Western powers.

The Syrians and their Lebanese Moslem backers have rejected similar blueprints — calling for a curtailed Syrian troop role and an expanded position for the Lebanese army — over recent months.

Giving an added note of urgency to the efforts was the first indication since the latest fighting began that the militias' Israeli allies might not stand idly by. The head of the foreign affairs and defense committee in Israel's parliament told Israeli state radio Wednesday, "I would not want to believe we'll allow the Syrians to destroy the Christians."

Meanwhile, Syrian President Assad arrived in Moscow today to try to get more Soviet arms for use against Christians and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's support in destroying the Camp David agreement between Egypt and Israel.

Despite rain, Brezhnev was at the airport to welcome the Syrian leader.

Pneumonia Resists Penicillin

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors fear that two newly discovered strains of pneumonia-causing bacteria — which resist almost all commonly used antibiotics — will spread throughout the world.

The bacteria, found in South Africa, cannot be destroyed by penicillin, the most frequently prescribed medicine for pneumonia. Only highly toxic drugs usually avoided by doctors will kill them.

The researchers say widespread administration of a newly approved vaccine may be the only practical way to fight the pneumonia caused by these germs, which was frequently a fatal disease before use of penicillin became common in the 1940s.

The bacteria were isolated in July, 1977, at two hospitals in Johannesburg and have spread throughout South Africa.

IGNORED ART NETS $8,500

For years Daniel Buckthorpe owned an old oil painting that never saw the light of day.

His wife hated the picture — an eastern Canadian harbor scene — and for that reason it was never hung in their home.

When the Buckthorpes moved here two years ago from Montreal the picture came with them wrapped in a plastic bag.

They stored it in the basement of their home at 1023 Holland and forgot about it until a couple of weeks ago.

Buckthorpe, a 49-year-old locksmith, is now glad he remembered that hated painting.

This week it was sold at an art auction at Lund's for $8,500.

The 21-inch by 28-inch painting is the work of famed Montreal artist Robert Pilot.

Buckthorpe acquired the painting about 11 years ago while he was cleaning out an attic in one of the buildings that used to be the residence of shipping magnate Sir Hugh Allen.

He asked if he could have it and was told: "Sure — all this junk has to go."

A couple of weeks ago the Buckthorpes were having dinner with friends when he mentioned he believed he had an original Pilot.

The friends were impressed and passed on the information to John Boyle, an auctioneer with Lunds.

"If it was a Pilot, would he sell?" Boyle asked.

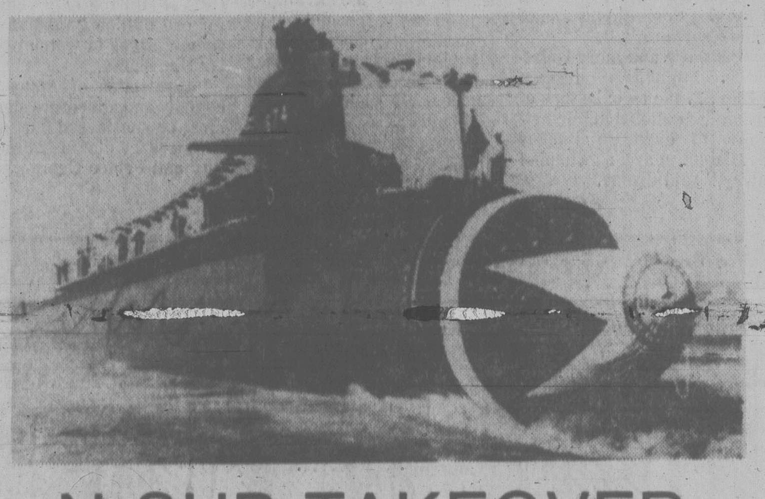
Buckthorpe agreed.

When Boyle called the next day and told him what it had sold for, Buckthorpe nearly collapsed.

"I was absolutely amazed," he said.

But Torban Kristiensen, an international art dealer from Vancouver, knew a good thing when he saw it.

Not only did he buy the Pilot but he picked up two smaller original oils by Group of Seven artists A.Y. Jackson and Edwin Holgate. For the Jackson he paid $1,400; for the Holgate $1,300.



N-SUB TAKEOVER PLOTTED BY TRIO

Times News Services

ST. LOUIS — It reads like the script for a best-selling spy thriller: board a U.S. nuclear submarine, kill the crew, head for the high seas after firing a nuclear-tipped missile at an East Coast city and then turn the sub over to a buyer.

But the Federal Bureau of Investigation says the plot was real and three men have been arrested.

The FBI said the conspirators told a federal undercover agent they had a purchaser for the submarine, the USS Trepang, based in New London. In announcing the breakup of the bizarre plot Wednesday night, agents said the identity of the prospective buyer — if any — was not known.

Bernard Feeney of the FBI in New Haven, Conn., said at least 20 agents have been working on the case in earnest since August although at first the agency had trouble taking the plot seriously.

"It sounds like a Woody Allen movie when you hear it for the first time," Feeney said.

But, he said, "The documentation was there for us to believe they were serious ... And you've got to nip it in the bud. You can't let these things run their course.

"I don't think it originated with another country," Feeney added. "Maybe these fellows thought they could hide it underwater and broker it someway."

He added, "There is no way with our sonar equipment that this thing could be out of pocket for too long."

Two suspects, Edward J. Mendenhall, 24, a life insurance company employee from Rochester, N.Y., and Kurtis J. Schmidt, a 22-year-old carpet cleaner formerly from St. Louis and now living in Kansas City, Mo., were arrested Wednesday in St. Louis.

The third suspect, James W. Cosgrove, 26, of Ovid, N.Y., was arrested early today in Rochester, N.Y.

Tight Budget Hits RJH Patient Care

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Patient care is beginning to suffer at Royal Jubilee Hospital as a result of budget restrictions by the provincial government.

RJH board vice-president Terry Prentice said in an interview: "Things are getting a little too tight."

He said because of a tight squeeze on RJH's budget, the hospital is having to cut staff or keep staffing to a minimum.

Prentice warned it has reaching the stage where the board feels there is danger of a staff revolt similar to the one which took place earlier this year at Vancouver Gneral Hospital.

He said because of the tight staffing, RJH employees are facing heavier workloads and sooner or later are going to say:

"To heck with you, if you don't care about me, I don't care about you."

"We are concerned that the situation is approaching that point now," Prentice said.

He said staff can quit or go on strike but the only people who will suffer if that happens are the patients.

Prentice gave some examples to illustrate the hospital's problems:

—A seven-month delay in elective surgery cases;

—About 800 elective surgery cases cancelled in the first nine months of this year;

—164 acute care beds occupied by patients who should be in hospitals providing other forms of care such as extended, long-term or personal;

—The hospital frequently has as many as 23 patients over the approved number, resulting in some patients being put in hallways.

Animals Worry Howie

The people have been friendly during Al Howie's long, lonely run to Port Hardy — and he hopes the bears and cougars will treat him the same way.

Howie is running to the northern tip of Vancouver Island to raise funds for the United Way campaign. Pledges to date top $200.

This morning Howie was running north of Campbell River and nearing Sayward-Kelsey Bay, the last outpost before plunging into the bush country. Kelsey Bay is 344 kilometres from his starting point in Victoria.

"I like animals but I keep thinking what it might be like to meet a cougar in the dark," he said this morning.

"I hope to make it to Port Hardy by Saturday. I will phone again Friday if I can reach a phone — and all has gone well."

So far the people have made his run a pleasant experience.

"Everyone seems to have heard about it and I got free lodging at Courtenay and a salmon dinner on the house at Campbell River."

Except for this occasional help, all expenses are coming out of Howie's pocket.

Those wishing to pledge funds to the United Way in support of Howie's run can reach the UW office by phoning 385-6708.

MAIN LINE OUT

A break in the main transmission line from the mainland knocked out power in southern Vancouver Island for about 20 minutes this morning.

The power failure tripped a couple of alarms and caused some traffic congestion in the downtown core but Greater Victoria police and firemen reported no major problems.

A spokesman for B.C. Hydro said the trouble originated at 9:51 a.m. in the direct current line from the mainland which ends at a substation north of Duncan.

The spokesman was unable to say whether the problems arose on the Island or mainland side of the line.

All of the lower Island except parts of the downtown Victoria area were affected.

Power began to be restored at 10:10 a.m.

Yiddish Writer Wins Nobel

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The 1978 Nobel Prize for literature was awarded today to Isaac Bashevis Singer, a prolific Jewish story-teller whose portraits of a bygone life in pre-war Poland have touched a basic "kinship between souls" and won him a wide audience.

The 74-year-old novelist and short-story writer, who writes in Yiddish, has lived in New York since emigrating from his Polish homeland 43 years ago. He is a U.S. citizen.

In awarding the $165,000 prize to Singer, the Swedish Academy of Letters cited him for "his impassioned narrative art which, with roots in a Polish-Jewish cultural tradition, brings universal human conditions to life."

Singer, reached in Miami, told a reporter: "I'm grateful but at the same time I am sorry that writers greater than I did not get it. I hope in the future that all people who deserve recognition shall get it.

"The greatest writers of all times did not get it. Tolstoy was a candidate and some

Battle Begins for U.S. TV

VANCOUVER (CP) — Television viewers in British Columbia, led by Liberal MP Art Lee and two radio talk show hosts, are combining forces in opposition to a proposal by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission to limit to four the number of United States television channels on cablevision.

Cablevision now carries six U.S. channels in the province.

The fight "boils down to the people telling the government what they want," says Lee, MP for Vancouver East.

Talk show hosts John Reynolds and Garry Bannerman both launched public opinion polls last week on the issue, and say that opposition to the four-channel limit is overwhelming.

Lee, who will be appearing before the CRTC Oct. 24 with an intervention on behalf of the Liberal caucus in B.C. to fight the cutback, suggested that the federal government might appoint a new CRTC which could reflect the needs of British Columbians.

There are currently no full-time B.C. members on the commission.

"At the present moment there is a review of the constitution and the chairmanship of all quasi-judicial bodies like the CRTC," Lee said. "My position is that the review should be extended to the individual members of these bodies to ensure there is regional representation to reflect the needs of the people."

The theory behind the CRTC proposal is that if there is a limit on the number of U.S. channels permitted on Canadian cablevision, more of the Canadian advertising dollar will go to Canadian stations, thereby providing more money for Canadian programming, he added.

If Canadian firms continue to advertise on U.S. stations, he said, it must be the programming of the Canadian stations that is at fault.

Sandy Buschan, spokesman for the Association of Lower Mainland Cablevision Operators, said that cablevision companies must carry all available Canadian content.

Drop Commercials On TV, CBC Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC was asked Wednesday to consider dropping advertising on its English-language television service and to adopt the format of public broadcasting service similar to those in the United States.

Pierre Camu, chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, said he would like to discuss the suggestion with CBC officials, perhaps today.

Jack Craine, network director of programming, had just finished telling the CRTC the CBC continued to carry U.S. programs because they helped draw bigger audiences for Canadian shows that followed them (see story on page 31) and because they helped generate much of the $90 million CBC earned in advertising revenue.

Craine admitted that the CBC was "nearing the end of the import era."

"As more and more isolated communities receive cable . . . the logic lessens of using the national public network to duplicate images available only a channel away," said Craine.

Camu said he wondered whether the time was far off when the commission could consider a Canadian public broadcasting service if CBC were to drop advertising.

Advertising paid only about 18 per cent of the CBC budget, he noted.

Many Canadians were fascinated by the public service broadcasting seen on their cable systems, he said. And they were sending money to support such systems in the United States.

Without commercials, an end to advertising constraints forcing CBC to air U.S. programs and no worries about ratings, there might not also be a need for a second proposed CBC network, Camu said.

The CBC is considering a second network service which would be available only on cable. It would run no commercials, operate only at night and would, among other things, rerun well-regarded CBC shows such as drama and ballets.

When president Al Johnson appeared before the commission to put the CBC's case for licence renewals, he said it was unrealistic at this time to consider dropping commercials for the television network.

He said this was especially so because of the $71 million cut in revenue CBC expected next year. The government announced the cut in August as part of its austerity program.

Craine, outlining scheduling problems to the CRTC, said the importance of the U.S. shows from a revenue point of view made it difficult for him to find prime time for Canadian specials.

But CBC charged higher advertising rates for the popular U.S. shows on prime time. And they drew larger audiences for Canadian shows that followed them.

Craine also noted that the CBC is still the only vehicle for one million Canadians in remote areas to watch popular U.S. shows.

"A selection of American comedy and adventure shows must be considered part of a balanced TV diet in Labrador City and Prince George," he said.

U.S. TV Battle Begins

"But if the viewing public wants more, why can't they have it?" he asked. "We just don't see the reasoning behind it (the four-channel limit.)"

Meanwhile, the vice-president of the CTV network said that Canadian television stations must broadcast U.S. programs as long as they come in by cable on other channels.

Don Coyle was responding to recent comments made by Al Johnson, CBC president, who said privately-owned stations have yielded to the profit motive by packing prime viewing hours with American programs.

Coyle said: "If you don't give Canadians what they want, they'll turn completely to American channels."

Paul Morton, president of Global Television Network, said it was easy for Johnson to make such statements "when you have a budget of half a billion dollars."

Morton said Global's budget was in the $30-million range.

Gov't Power Abuse Warning from Blais

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais issued a warning Wednesday against government abuse of power and authority, saying state intervention through legislation often infringes on basic human rights.

"Such is the potential for abuse of authority inherent in so many discretionary powers that the members of the legal profession must be on the alert constantly for any subversion of the individual's rights," Blais said.

He referred to a Law Reform Commission study identifying some 15,000 discretionary powers granted government and bureaucrats through legislation. And he spoke of threats to rights posed by a proliferation in the last few years of government boards, commissions and administrative tribunals.

"When the state intervenes through legislation it often infringes upon basic human rights," he said in a speech to University of Ottawa law students.

"The state endeavours to protect its citizens collectively, but often at the expense of the citizen's absolute freedom — a very difficult sacrifice to make.

"This dilemma faces every individual and future lawyers cannot remain indifferent to this situation, for it brings the very foundations of our society into question."

Blais was telling the students that there is room for increasing numbers of lawyers in fields other than civil and criminal law practice. A text of his speech was released in advance.

He said increasing numbers of citizens find they have to contend with administrative bodies, requiring more lawyers to assist them through "this seemingly bewildering maze."

The growth in the maze has increased the need to protect the rights of the individual against the state but Blais said that while the need to protect the rights of the individual against the state has increased, such protections are often not apparent in semi-judicial situations.

"Unfortunately, whether or not justice is actually done before these boards and tribunals, the appearance of justice is often missing because apparent checks on the abuse of the individual's civil rights are not as much in evidence as they are in criminal proceedings."

Rules of evidence are looser and decisions are made on the basis of two sides of argument, rather than proof of something beyond a reasonable doubt. Yet the result of such decisions may be as severe as sanctions under the Criminal Code, he said.

Budget Squeeze

Prentice said the board is seeking a meeting with Health Minister Bob McClelland to try impress upon him the seriousness of the situation.

He said the hospital wants to get its message across soon enough to prevent problems similar to those at Vancouver General Hospital.

Prentice made his remarks in commenting on the board's annual meeting Wednesday night.

The meeting was told the hospital ended the fiscal year March 31, 1978 with a deficit of $60,000. That figure covered the 15-month period from Jan. 1, 1977.

Prentice said the deficit was $1.5 million prior to some cost levelling by the hospital programs section of the department of health.

He said the hospital could have made $500,000 more if its acute care beds had been all occupied by acute care patients. The government pays the hospital $100 a day more for acute care patients than extended care patients.

However, he said, there is a lack of beds for other kinds of care and as a result, those people who really need extended care have to stay in hospitals like RJH.

The solution is to provide more facilities for other kinds of care, he said.

This lack of beds also affects the surgery that is done because without a bed to put them in the hospital is unable to offer elective surgery to patients who need it.

Prentice said RJH now has working capital to cover only four working days and if it has to borrow from the bank it will have to pay the added interest from its approved budget, putting further strain on things like staffing.

He said the government has only approved a two-per-cent increase in salaries for nurses and other hospital employees this year even though negotiated settlements call for a four-per-cent increase.

That two-per-cent difference, which must be found in the approved budget, amounts to about $600,000 he said.

Prentice said he realizes the costs of health care these days are high and it is difficult for the minister to keep things under control.

"Those in the hospital are saying we do what we can, but we feel we have cut things too far."

He said McClelland told the hospitals two years ago that they should cut costs wherever they could without harming patient care.

"We say it is our value judgement that we are at that point now."

Car Builder Revving Up On '34 Ford Roadsters

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

ANDREW Timmis doesn't look, dress or talk like your average auto industry tycoon.

But he's the owner, president, production chief, designer and head mechanic of the largest automobile assembly plant in Canada west of the Great Lakes.

His modest factory in a converted Victoria warehouse is now building a line of cars which he hopes will carve out a lucrative chunk of the fast-growing market for reproduction antique cars, and embellish the reputation he has already acquired in this field.

Right now the cars don't look too exciting, little more than a line of fiberglass shells sitting on chassis which are in turn mounted on concrete blocks.

But by Christmas the finished product should be ready for delivery — 10 gleaming, elegant, authentic-to-the-last-detail 1934 Ford roadsters.

Timmis and employee Shaun Kelly on the assembly line

Timmis, 31, a car fanatic from as far back as he can remember, says he has been working toward this goal for 10 years.

Before production even started this spring, with a team of six employees, he had spent a solid year in preparation and planning — tracking down parts and materials, lining up suppliers and seeing to a thousand other details.

He's reluctant to talk about the financial aspects of his venture, other than to concede there's a lot of money invested and that he has had some assistance from the B.C. Development Corporation.

Although Timmis won't give any indication how much the cars will be sold for, a Victorian with experience of the antique car market says the price would be a minimum of around $20,000.

Whatever the figure, the car maker appears to have little doubt there will be customers ready to pay — most if not all of them in the U.S.

In all Timmis has made 21 versions of the Ford roadster on a one-at-a-time basis, but this is his first foray into mass-production reproduction cars.

When he began turning them out in 1968, he was the only person in North America making a fiberglass car of this type. But in recent years three other companies have followed suit.

Why this particular model and not some other?

Timmis explains that most people interested in older cars naturally lean toward a convertible, and the most graceful styling for such cars was in the early 1930s when designers produced clean, uncluttered lines.

"In the 'teens and '20s car design was still trying to progress from the buggy era," he says.

He has built versions with all new parts, but this line will come with a mixture of recycled and new parts, many of them hand-made.

Some mechanical parts are made in Brazil, the rubber items in Argentina, small chrome parts in Hong Kong and the steering wheels in California.

Others are made by Timmis Motors or by Victoria-area firms.

THE engine of the 1934 Ford — a flathead V8, one of the most powerful made in those days — continued to be built substantially unchanged until 1954, and Timmis has been able to find the 10 he needed mostly from old cars acquired on Vancouver Island.

These are sent to the Ford rebuilding plant in Vancouver and the reconditioned engine comes with a 12,000-mile guarantee.

Timmis said the single most frustrating aspect of his venture has been the endless hassles and problems with customs regulations.

If his business grows to the point where he's producing about 100 cars a year, the frustrations with bureaucracy alone would be enough to drive him off the Island, he says.

"I would move like a shot to Washington state," he adds.

City Aid Asked In Getting Copter Service

Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. today asked the city of Victoria for assistance in establishing a Vancouver-Victoria service that would require construction of terminals worth up to $2 million.

In a brief to city council's intergovernmental relations committee, Okanagan marketing manager Kyle Steele said his company proposes to operate a helicopter airline service between the city's heliport pad on Esquimalt Road and an as-yet-undetermined location along Vancouver's waterfront near the foot of Burrard Street.

He said the service would use 28-passenger Sikorsky S61N helicopters certified and equipped for instrument flight regulations, meaning that they could fly under poor weather conditions.

Steele said the downtown-to-downtown flight times would be about 30 to 35 minutes and "we estimate that at least 95 per cent of scheduled flights could be completed in the face of inclement weather."

Steele also said the service would be competitive with existing services provided public ownership of terminal facilities is possible.

He said provision of terminals is estimated to cost $1 to $2 million.

He asked council to endorse the proposed operation and to join with the city of Vancouver in applying to the provincial government under the Airports Assistance Program for funding of the proposed terminals and facilities in both cities.

Steele said Okanagan estimated it would have to spend between $500,000 and $700,000 on the purchase and installation of instruments and related equipment.

The committee tabled the matter after Mayor Mike Young said it should be dealt with at a future date when council considers the whole issue of air commuter traffic in Victoria.

There is growing concern at City Hall about the increasing amount of floatplane traffic in the Inner Harbor.

Young said the helicopter proposal should also be taken under advisement for the time being because he felt the terminal cost figures quoted were very conservative.

He said the $2 million estimate didn't take into consideration the cost to the city for the land involved or for committing the property to that use.

Official Ponders Legal Action

Victoria personnel director Terry FitzPatrick said today he's not sure whether he'll take legal action against the city for his sudden dismissal Tuesday.

No reason for the firing has been given by Mayor Mike Young and council.

FitzPatrick had 31 years service with the city and was five years away from retirement.

He said he has discussed the matter with his lawyer but will wait until Oct. 12 when his dismissal becomes official before deciding his course of action.

Although he initially expected to work until the end of the week, FitzPatrick was told Wednesday he is expected to leave city hall as soon as possible.

OVERDOSE NOT ALWAYS FATAL

Man's Chance Slim - Doctor

Seventy-two-year-old Galliano Giovanni Piccoli who died last month in Royal Jubilee Hospital following a mixup in his medication would probably have died even if the correct dosage had been administered, a heart specialist told a coroner's jury Wednesday.

Dr. Michael Cody said Piccoli, who was admitted to the emergency room with a suspected heart attack the evening of Sept. 17, was in a desperate condition and that his chances of surviving were slight.

He noted an autopsy report showed Piccoli was suffering from emphysema, bronchitis, obesity, hardening of the arteries. He also had a greatly enlarged heart and a history of coronary problems.

Piccoli was attended to by Dr. Jacob Sturmwind, a general practictioner who happened to be in the emergency room on a call for another doctor.

Last week Sturmwind told the jury he had injected Xylocaine into Piccoli in hopes of restoring the stricken man's heart rhythm.

However, he testified, through a mixup in the syringes, he had inadvertently given Piccoli twice the recommended dosage of the drug.

Piccoli went into convulsions and despite attempts by physicians to resuscitate him, died a short time later.

Cody said that while the dosage was toxic, it was not necessarily a lethal dose. He said a search of medical literature shows a number of cases where patients have received even higher dosages than Piccoli, and survived.

Sturmwind said last week he had asked for a 100-milligram syringe of Xylocaine to be injected as a bolus, that is all at once, but nurse Jean Haley handed him a 1,000-milligram syringe.

Haley testified on Wednesday, however, she had never handed Sturmwind any syringes.

She said she had taken two 1,000-milligram syringes from a store of drugs in response to an urgent request from Sturmwind for "Xylocaine and a Xylocaine drip." She said she understood Sturmwind as wanting a bolus of Xylocaine as well as a solution of the drug to be given through an intravenous bag.

But, she said, she had trouble putting one of the 1,000-milligram syringes together and went to ask her supervisor, Mrs. Susan Drysdale, how to use it.

After being told the syringe was to be used for dilution only, Mrs. Haley returned, stopping on the way to pick up a 100-milligram bolus of the drug.

When she got back she found Sturmwind had already taken the larger syringe and had injected about a third of it into Piccoli through the intravenous tubing.

"I said 'this is the Xyolcaine for direct injection . . . you've given the wrong medication.' "

She said Sturmwind replied "Oh, no."

"I turned and looked at Mr. Piccoli and saw the patient was getting into seizure," she said.

The inquest resumes Oct. 11 before coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

Young Cyclist Badly Injured

A 12-year-old boy is in serious condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital after riding his bicycle into the side of a car in Sidney Wednesday evening.

Sidney RCMP said Christopher Kipot of 10120 Meadlana received head injuries in the mishap which occurred at Mills and Munro.

Police said driver of the car was Cheryl Thomas, 36, of 2-35 Lewis in Victoria.

Ask the Times

Q. We live in Esquimalt and have watched quite a few parades of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps over the years. We wonder if the corps is named for the rainbow or a ship. Can you tell us? C.R.

A. The corps is named after the first ship to be commissioned into the Royal Canadian Navy. A former Royal Navy cruiser she became HMCS Rainbow on Aug. 4, 1910.

Q. Can you tell me if a Canadian yacht has ever challenged the United States for the America's Cup? B.W.

A. Yes, twice, both unsuccessfully. The Countess of Dufferin sailed against the Americans in 1876 and the Atalanta in 1881.

'It's Slow, Uphill Climb' To Change Indian Image

The class of elementary school children listens attentively as the spokesmen from the Victoria Native Indian Friendship Centre tell about their people — their arts and crafts, their culture and the issues they face.

It's all part of a native awareness program, says Butch Dick, the centre's executive director.

Last year 48 elementay schools were visited and Dick says he hopes the program will become an integral part of the school system.

He sees it as a long-term investment to help dispel the stereotyped image of the native Indian as a drunk or a welfare case.

Dick says the benefits may never be seen by his generation.

"It's a slow, uphill climb," he says, adding the image is the biggest stumbling block his people face.

The centre at 1298 Gladstone Avenue is a busy place. In one week as many as 350 use its facilities.

Dick says about 75 per cent of them are people from reservations who feel lost in their new urban setting. The remainder are from reservations in the area.

At the centre they develop skills and rediscover their pride in the past. They learn to cope with their new life, gaining mental stature as they do.

Dick describes the centre as a clearing house with one of its essential functions being communication with the society that surrounds it and the Indians themselves, who speak seven dialects.

The centre is one of 19 througnout B.C. and one of 23 agencies that look to the United Way for financial help.

This year's United Way campaign has a target of $926,500, a nine per cent increase over last year's $792,147, which was reached.

today's markets

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a small gain in an erratic session today, struggling in the face of some adverse inflation news.

Gainers held a broad lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market had built up some forward momentum in a late wave of buying Wednesday, when the Dow posted a 6.06-point gain.

But the government reported that the wholesale price index of finished goods jumped 0.9 per cent in September.

Brokers noted that that figure — equal to a 10.8 per cent annual rate — tended to dampen whatever hopes for a break in inflationary pressures had been aroused by a 0.1 percent decline in the index during August.

After a weak start, the market jumped ahead at mid-day, only to begin retreating again.

Cox Broadcasting jumped 9½ to $59 on word that the company and General Electric planned merger talks.

GE shares eased ¼ to $52¾.

Active mid-afternoon trading.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 3.17 million shares, up from 2.75 million at the same time Wednesday.

Advances outnumbered declines 240 to 150 with 218 issues unchanged.

Trading remained halted in shares of M. Loeb Ltd., last at $7⅝, pending an announcement expected Friday.

Hollinger Mines Ltd. declined and Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd. was unchanged following brief halts for dissemination of news of special dividend payments.

Hollinger Class A shares dropped 1 to $42 on the sale of 700 shares with news that a special $1 dividend will be paid in addition to its regular quarterly payment of 51.52 cents.

Labrador Mining was up ¾ to $44 on 325 shares before the announcement of a $3 special dividend in addition to its regular 62.96-cent payment.

Numac Oil and Gas climbed 1¼ to $30⅜.

Peonies: Lots of Variety

Peonies are liked by some home gardeners and disliked by others, possibly because they know only the red bomb-like blooms of Paeonia officinalis.

Even the officinalis group contains 10 or more varieties ranging in color from pure white through soft pink, salmon-rose, salmon-orange, carmine-rose, to the frequently seen dark red.

Virtually unknown to home gardeners are the early, mid-season, and late-flowering peonies, double flowered in the Paeonia albiflora section, and the single-flowered group which includes the Japanese singles.

These are the kinds with the interesting summer foliage which turns to true fall colors in September and is so often seen in flower arrangements at fall shows.

In the albiflora section, all with double flowers, there are some 21 varieties which flower early, 26 mid-season and 23 late flowering, to cover a flowering period from early June until late July.

In this group are names which are high on the list of varieties used by flower arrangers for late spring and summer, such as Felix Crousse (red), Festiva maxima (double white with crimson flecks), Karl Rosenfield (bright crimson), Monsieur Jules Elie (large pink), and Sarah Bernhardt (deep rose-pink, salmon tipped). All are long lasting as cut flowers.

The Japanese and the singles bear flowers that close at night to protect the pollen on the large cushion of stamens filling the centre of each bloom, with over 50 varieties from which to choose. These flowers remain on the plants for seven to 10 days.

As if this was not sufficient for any peony enthusiast, there are at least 21 species and hybrids of species, 19 varieties of Paeonia suffruticosa (the tree peony) and eight extremely choice varieties in Paeonia lemoinei, the result of crossing Paeonia lutea (yellow) with the tree peony.

As mentioned frequently in this column, peonies do not like being disturbed. There are plants known to have been in one place for 50 years, yet have never missed a flowering season. In the peony we have one herbaceous perennial that does not need renewing every three to five years.

Occasionally, when replantning the garden or making changes to existing buildings, peonies have to be moved. Since the peony has a very short resting period, approximately from Sept. 15 to Oct.15, lifting and replanting should be done within the next 10 days.

Soil preparation is the same when moving a peony as for planting newly purchased tubers.

Remove the topsoil and break up the subsoil one spade deep. Mix rough, partially decayed compost with the subsoil.

Mix screened compost with the topsoil, making a 50-50 mix. Place some of this mixture in the planting hole, then try the clump of tubers for depth. Fill in with topsoil until the top of the tubers are not more than two inches below the level of the surrounding soil.

Gently firm the fill to prevent sinking and half-fill the hole with the topsoil mixture. Pour in water to drive out air, and allow to drain away before the balance of the topsoil is added.

With plenty of humus in the soil and shallow planting, flowering should be normal next year.

When planting newly purchased single tubers, prepare a large size hole in the same way, because it will only be a year or so before there is a clump of tubers to fill the space.
